Dallas Votes

4-1 Against Integration

Balloting Heavy In Referendum On School Issue

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Dallas residents voted overwhelmingly against school integration in a special referendum Saturday.

The vote was 22,807 against and 5,690 for in returns from 112 of 134 boxes.

Election officials said the total vote might reach 50,000—or about twice the size of any previous vote here on a school issue.

Results of the referendum will have no effect on whether Dallas schools are integrated.

JUDGE ORDERS START

U.S. Dist. Judge T. Whitfield Davidson has ordered the school district to begin a limited plan of integration by September 1961. It calls for only three schools to be designated as integrated, and minority group pupils can transfer out of them. Negroes who took the matter to court have appealed this order.

The judge said he thought federal courts would not uphold a state law requiring a school district to gain approval in a referendum before integrating its schools.

But he urged the board to go ahead with the referendum as a kind of barometer of public opinion and indicated that if Dallas voters approved integration he might revise his original order and require complete integration.

State laws provide for loss of nearly three million dollars in state aid to the Dallas school system should the system desegregate without a favorable integration vote.

In addition, the system would lose state accreditation and its officials could be fined.

State officials have indicated that aid will be cut off immediately should the board integrate schools without a favorable integration vote. Presumably the school district would sue in court to seek to have the state aid restored.

The system has 151 schools and about 146,000 pupils. The district's budget for this school year, not yet published, is expected to be in excess of $45 million dollars.

Alabama Solon

To Renew Fight For Tidelands

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Alabama congressman will inject the controversial tidelands oil issue into the already-crowded work schedule facing congress at its post-convention session.

Rep. Kenneth A. Roberts (D-Ala.) said Saturday he will introduce a bill to give Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi offshore oil rights up to 10 and one half miles from their shorelines.

Roberts' venture, which apparently does not have Senate support at this time, is expected to get out of committee before the congress adjourns.

The bill would be an amendment to the submerged lands act of 1953 which set the offshore limits for all Gulf of Mexico states at three miles unless a deeper "historical boundary" was proved.

The Supreme Court, in a May 31 decision, ruled that Florida and Texas proved historical boundaries. It granted them rights extending 10 and one half miles, or three leagues, into the Gulf. However, the court ruled that Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama did not have similar proof and restricted them to three miles or one league.

Neither Alabama nor Mississippi stand to lose much by the Supreme Court decision at present. However, Louisiana, which has done a thriving business in offshore oil drilling, would lose $300 million under the Supreme Court decision.

Roberts said the decision was "unfair and unconscionable. It was certainly not the intent of congress in passing the submerged lands act to give any particular states

Army Reports GI 'Vanishes'

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — The U.S. Army disclosed Saturday that a Polish-born American soldier has vanished from his military intelligence unit near Frankfurt.

The disclosure was made by an Army spokesman after the Communist East German News Agency DNB reported that a U.S. "secret service agent" had defected to the Soviet zone.

U.S. Army headquarters at Heidelberg identified the missing soldier as Spec. 5 Vladimir Slovoda, 33, a native of Poland who became a U.S. citizen through naturalization in 1952.

IN CONGRESS SESSION

Ike Vetoes Push On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Eisenhower administration has abandoned as politically unwise plans to pressure for new and stronger civil rights legislation in the session of Congress beginning Monday, it was revealed Saturday.

High officials said they believed that in view of the partisan racial rights squabble expected to break out in both Senate and House, such a move might be construed as a cynical attempt to embarrass the Democrats.

REVISE PLANS

The Justice Department earlier had planned to make a renewed plea for some of its old civil rights proposals and to offer new ones. But sources said that this strategy, worked out by Vice President Richard M. Nixon and his close adviser, Attorney General William P. Rogers, has been revised since Nixon was named the GOP presidential nominee.

Some Republican members of Congress already have announced they will introduce civil rights legislation embodying Democratic platform pledges in a frank attempt to embarrass the Democrats.

Last night as we were about to attend to duties in connection with a three week vacation, Jes' Ramblin' enjoyed a supper at a downtown restaurant where he ate a hurried supper. But when his attention was called to his headgear he pulled off the hat he had taken as his own at the cafe.

U.S. Assails Soviet Acts Before Trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States accused Russia Saturday of waging a "hysterical" campaign to inflame public prejudice before the spy trial of American U-2 pilot Francis G. Powers begins in Moscow Aug. 17.

The State Department also reported the Soviet Union has rejected a U.S. request that American attorneys be allowed to help prepare Powers' defense. U.S. officials have been refused permission to see Powers since he was captured May 1 when his reconnaissance plane was brought down 1,300 miles inside Russia.

Department spokesman David Waters bluntly charged that the Russian propaganda machine is trying to whip up anti-American public opinion before the Powers, Va., airman is tried. He cited as evidence a claim published in the Soviet newspaper Trud that American exchange student Edwin Morrell was expelled from Moscow University for spying.

Denying the Morrell accusation as completely false, Waters said: "The Soviet press seems to be full of this kind of fairy tale now. It is only too apparent that the objective is to inflame public opinion in advance of the scheduled trial of Francis Powers."

"I doubt that these somewhat hysterical efforts will have much effect outside of the closed societies of the Communist bloc," he said.

Waters said Morrell was asked to leave Russia last June on grounds he had failed to carry out his academic work satisfactorily. No charges of espionage were made against the 31-year-old student until Friday, he noted.

Soviet rejection of an appeal that American attorneys be allowed to help Powers was contained in an Aug. 4 note from the Russians in which they announced that a Moscow lawyer identified only as "Attorney Griniv" had been assigned to defend him.

Parents Of U-2 Pilot To Leave For Trial Today

NORTON, Va. (AP)—A middle-aged couple who admittedly don't like to travel far from their home in the southwest Virginia hills leave Sunday on the longest and most distressing trip of their lives.

Their destination is the Soviet Union and the spy trial of their only son, Francis G. Powers.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Powers said Saturday they hope to arrive in Moscow before their son goes on trial Aug. 17. They will be accompanied by Sol W. Curry, home-town friend and adviser.

Oliver Powers would not disclose details of his plan for the trip. He indicated, however, the family and Curry would move to Washington but said if he were bothered, they might catch a plane. He declined to say where they would go, or how, when they leave the nation's capital.

The spy charges were placed against young Powers after his U-2 reconnaissance plane went down in the Soviet Union May 1.

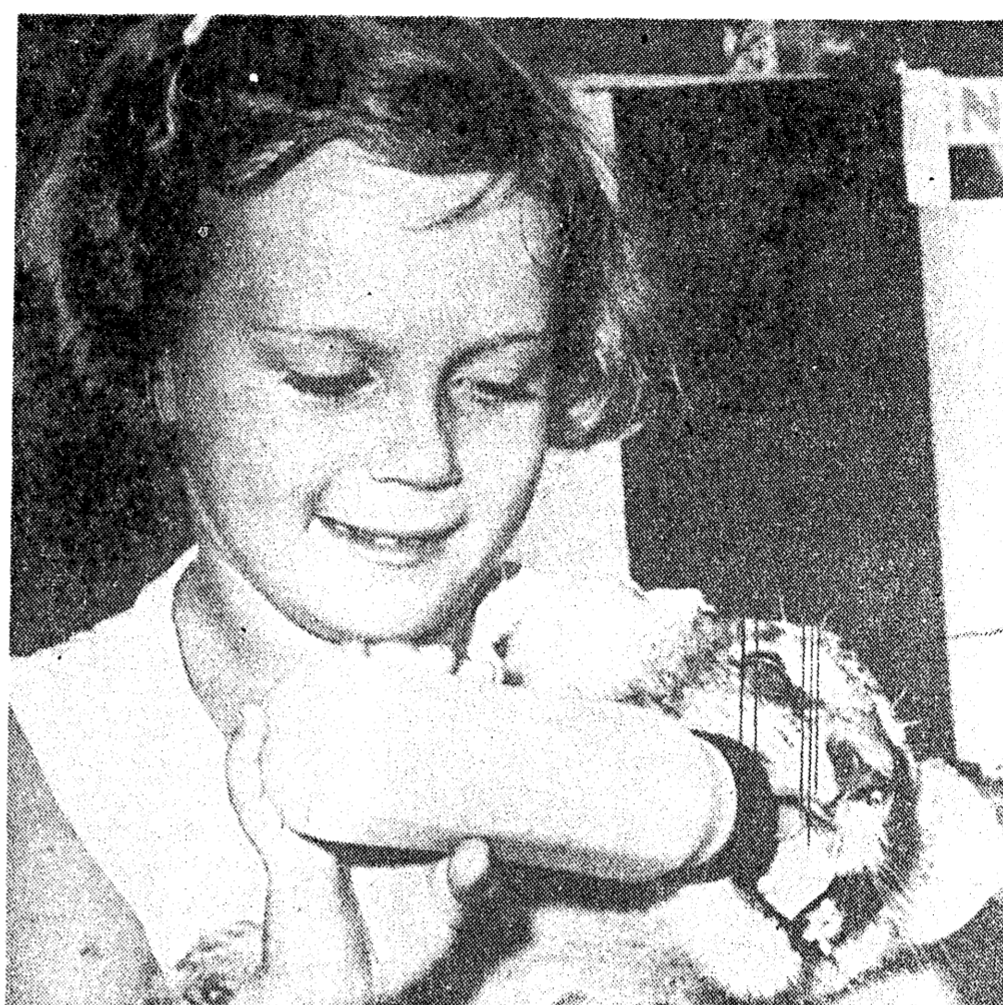

Soviet visas were issued Tuesday for the pilot's mother; his wife, Barbara Powers; Curry; Dr. Lewis K. Ingram, personal physician for the elder Mrs. Powers; and Carl A. McAfee, attorney for Oliver Powers. The pilot's father had received his visa in June.

Beauty Crowned In Mississippi

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP)—Patricia McKane, a 20-year-old brown-eyed beauty representing McKane, won the Miss Mississippi crown Saturday night, and Mississippi hopes for a third Miss America.

Lynda Mead of Natchez, Miss. America of 1960, crowned Miss McKane before a wildly cheering audience for the climax of the four-night pageant sponsored by the Vicksburg Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Miss McKane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McKane, is a senior art student at the University of Mississippi.

All American Property In Cuba Seized

HAVANA (AP) — Ailing Fidel Castro got up from his sick bed at midnight Saturday for a major address but after a half hour lost his voice and was unable to continue.

The prime minister was replaced on the speaker's stand by his younger brother Raul, who immediately announced a decree nationalizing "by force" all American owned property in Cuba.

The announcement sent the giant crowd at Havana's Baseball Stadium into a frenzied roar of approval.

The Castro government already has seized about one-third of the estimated one-billion-dollar U. S. investment in Cuba.

Prime Minister Castro's voice cracked as he launched into an attack on American "imperialism."

He called it the "historic ailment" of Latin America.

Only a hoarse whisper came from the 33-year-old Cuban strongman's lips as he frantically tried to continue.

Those on the speaking platform rushed to his side as he turned about seemingly looking for help. He turned back to the microphones and with great effort cried out: "Silence, silence, please."

The crowd — estimated at 55,000 — shouted in unison: "Let him rest, let him rest!"

Others on the platform, including President Osvaldo Dorticos, appeared to go into a conference with the prime minister, who finally sat down with apparent reluctance.

His 29-year-old brother Raul, minister of armed forces, then took over.

Clear Weather Will Prevail

Looks as though Monroe is enjoying a nice run of good weather, because the forecast is the same — clear to partly cloudy skies, continued hot through Sunday night, with only a slight chance of an afternoon or evening thundershower.

The high temperature today is predicted to be 95. The high for Saturday was 94, and the low, 73, according to Federal Aviation Agency at Selman Field.

Louisiana and Arkansas are in for the same type of weather, partly cloudy through Sunday with scattered thundershowers in the afternoon and evening.

U.N. Chief Hints At Compromise

Sixth Birthday Ends Tragically For Area Child

BASTROP (Special) — Eddie Dwayne Hughes' sixth birthday Friday ended in tragedy when he was struck by a car. He was unconscious and is in serious condition in a Shreveport hospital where he was taken for treatment.

The child, son of Mrs. Edna Hughes, 1114 North Washington St., Bastrop, suffered severe head injuries according to Morehouse General Hospital officials, where he was taken from the scene of the accident.

According to reports last night, the lad had not regained consciousness since he was struck. He was transferred to the Shreveport Hospital in Shreveport upon the advice of Bastrop doctors.

CROSSING STREET

According to witnesses, he and another child had crossed North Washington Street near Child's food store, where the accident occurred, bought a candy bar and were on their way back across the street.

WHEN PATHS CROSS

Harold McSween, Long Trade Yells

FLORIEN, La. (UPI) — U.S. Rep. Harold McSween and ex-Gov. Earl K. Long, fighting viciously for a congressional post, stood in the sun and screamed at each other Saturday after an accidental meeting.

Trading yells of "shame on you," McSween, the incumbent, accused Long of selling out his famous brother Huey, and Long accused McSween of theft and political skulduggery.

Their paths crossed accidentally in this little Sabine Parish community when Long, due to speak 45 minutes before McSween, was an hour late. He was still going when McSween drove up.

Long saw McSween in his car and issued a challenge.

"Come on up here right now," he bellowed. The crowd of 100 craned around to see who had drawn Earl's fire. "Use my sound equipment and tell them about those checks. Tell them about the strip-teasers. I never stole a nickel in my life."

Long has accused McSween of mishandling federal checks, and McSween has pointed out Long's friendship with various strip-teasers.

McSween accepted and walked to the microphone as Long stalked off into the crowd.

Long turned dramatically and hollered:

"Come on up there. Nobody's gonna hurt you. I'm 64 years old and you are 30 so get on up there."

McSween is seeking re-election in his runoff battle with Long to represent the Eighth District of Louisiana in the House of Representatives. A third candidate, Ben

Shoots Man, Then Waits For Sheriff

FERRIDAY (Special) — A former Monroe man yesterday afternoon shot and killed his ex-brother-in-law, and then walked about 200 yards from the scene and calmly waited for the police to come and arrest him.

Wayne George, of Lismore, and formerly of Monroe, admitted firing six shots at L. R. Simmons, of Orange, Tex., while he was working at his farm near Black River in Concordia.

Simmons died instantly after being struck in the chest and under the arm by two of the bullets. The shooting occurred near Simmons' farm house about 2:15 p.m. yesterday and was witnessed by a butane gas deliveryman, J. R. Booth.

APPARENT FEUD

According to reports the incident followed a recent series of fence cutting on Simmons' property and the burning of an old abandoned house on his farm. Deputies said George admitted cutting the fences and setting the fire prior to the shooting.

Booth told investigators Simmons flagged him down as he drove along the highway and asked him to put some butane in his tank at his farm house.

Booth said he was putting gas in the tank when George walked over the levee near Simmons' house. He told officers Simmons turned and spoke to George. Then, he said George raised a pistol and fired six times. Simmons died immediately.

Deputies said the gun was a .22 caliber pistol. George reportedly turned and started walking down the road. Booth rushed to a nearby store and telephoned the Concordia Sheriff's department.

When deputies rushed to the scene, they found George calmly sitting on the levee beside the road about 200 yards from where the shooting took place.

Officers said he got up and gave them the gun. They said he admitted the shooting then.

Senators Ask Full Report On Missing Pair

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Armed Services Committee has asked the Pentagon to provide a full report on the mysterious disappearance of two employees of the hush-hush National Security Agency, it was disclosed Saturday.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), chairman of the committee, said he was "vitaly interested" in the case of the two men, who are believed to have gone behind the Iron Curtain.

Russell said he expected the defense Department to give him a report on the missing mathematicians Monday.

The men, who had access to certain secret defense information, are Bernon F. Mitchell, 31, of Eureka, Calif., and William H. Martin, 29, of Ellensburg, Wash. Both are bachelors and former Navy men.

They dropped out of sight June 24 after telling friends they had planned to spend a vacation visiting their parents on the west coast. But they never showed up. Later they were traced to Mexico and Cuba.

The defense Department said Friday its investigation so far showed a likelihood that Mitchell and Martin had gone behind the Iron Curtain.

But the Pentagon insisted that the pair did not have any information in their possession which could be prejudicial to the security of the United States.

sibility of new Soviet personal attacks on himself and Dr. Ralph Bunche, the troubleshooter whose report on Katanga's determination to fight led Hammarskjöld to cancel plans for U.N. forces to enter Katanga Saturday.

He already was under attack by the Moscow press and radio for what the Russians said was condoning "Belgian aggression" in the Congo. Those attacks led to hints in the British press he and Bunche might resign but observers here seriously doubted he would quit under fire.

The disgruntled Congo central government, angry at Katanga's secession and angrier still at Hammarskjöld's refusal to dispatch U.N. forces to fight the Katanga troops, said Saturday the secretary had done his best to ignore the Security Council.

The Security Council, which met twice before in crisis session over the Congo, has ordered U.N. forces to replace Belgian troops in the Congo. Friday Hammarskjöld ruled out the use of force and called the council into session Sunday night.

There were reports Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba might cut short a visit to other African nations and join the world statesmen rushing back to New York for the meeting. The Congo announced it was sending a high-powered delegation led by President Joseph Kasavubu and had appealed to Lumumba to speed to New York.

There was rejoicing in Elisabethville, capital of Katanga Province, over the U.N. decision not to send in troops and Premier Moïse Tshombe sent light planes flying over the jungle villages dropping leaflets to announce his victory.

Tshombe also virtually sealed off Katanga from the outside world and pressed plans to confirm and if necessary defend its independence. Airports were blocked off and the government suspended all dealings in foreign currency until it introduces its own on Tuesday.

The Hammarskjöld compromise to be laid before the Security Council was reported by U.N. observers to envisage a loosely confederated Congo republic in which Katanga and other provinces would retain almost complete autonomy.

Hammarskjöld himself hinted of this in his report to the Security Council when he ruled out bloodshed or interference in the internal affairs of the Congo.

Four Men Held For Burglary

GADSDEN, Ala. (UPI) — Four men Saturday were under $1,000 bond each on charges of burglarizing a coin dealer's establishment in Louisville, Ky., of $10,000 worth of coins March 11.

Sheriff Dewey Colvard identified the four as Ford Pointer, 48; Curly Hall, 48; Roy Woods, 29; and Pete Helton, 50; all of Gadsden. Colvard said another man allegedly involved in the case was held at a Georgia jail but he had no more details.

tempt to put the Democrats on the spot.

Planning this attack is Rep. William E. Miller (R-N.Y.), chairman of the Republican congressional committee who said the bills would give the Democrats a chance to "stand up and be counted over whether they really support their own platform."

The administration is reluctant to become embroiled in such a situation. It has steadfastly claimed that it has posted a strong non-partisan civil rights record for which it has not been given full credit.

This was underscored Saturday by Nixon's disclosure that Rogers has been meeting with the executives of chain stores with southern outlets to try and convince them they should end discrimination against Negroes.

The administration's views came to light as Rogers received a report from Assistant Attorney General Harold R. Tyler Jr., who heads the Justice Department's civil rights division.

Tyler reported on the status of voting cases brought under the legislation passed both in 1957 and earlier this year.

He noted that voting cases are now pending in Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana while another case in Tennessee was successfully completed in April.

"Significantly, the acts of 1957 and 1960 have been ultimately upheld in every court test of these statutes to date," a Justice Department statement said.

The Georgia case was filed in Terrell County, Tyler recalled; the Alabama suit in Macon County, the Louisiana case in Washington Parish, and the Tennessee action in Fayette County.

The report noted that action is pending and a trial will probably take place this fall in Bienville Parish, La., on grounds of voting discrimination.

Tyler also reported that "another important suit" was filed by his division last May against officials of Harrison County, Miss. This complaint, he reported, involved an alleged breach of contract between the United States and the county for erection of a sea wall and beach on the Gulf coast near Biloxi.

The government contends that Mississippi authorities have violated the contract by restricting the beach to white persons only.

Singing Meeting Scheduled Today At Booster Hall

The Booster Singing Convention will hold its regular monthly meeting this afternoon at 1:30 in Booster Hall in the 400 block of Ouachita Ave.

This was announced by Garland May, president, who said that fans will be in operation in the hall to combat the heat, and a public address system will amplify the songs.

He said that a portion of the singing would be tape recorded for a future broadcast.

A number of leading gospel singers from areas of Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Tennessee will be featured. Among them will be Otis Deaton, Newsome, Texas; Mrs. Robert B. Vaughan, Milan, Tenn.; and Miss Irene Lindsey, Camden, Ark.

A new gospel song book will be used at the session, May said.

The meeting is open to the public.

of no arguments between George and Simmons. George reportedly gave no reason for his actions.

Simmons, who resided at Orange, Tex., often came to work on his farm in Concordia Parish, according to reports. Booth said Simmons had been plowing before he flagged him down.

Simmons was divorced from George's sister several years ago, one deputy said.

Funeral services for Simmons were still incomplete late last night.

George was being held in the Concordia Parish jail on an open charge.

"Shame on you for testifying against your brother, Earl Long," intoned McSween.

Long raised his right hand and shouted "I did not do it, and shame on you for stealing those checks."

"I did not do that either," countered McSween.

"You damn sure did," snorted Long.

special privileges while robbing and shortchanging other states."

This viewpoint coincides with that of Justice Hugh L. Black who said in a dissent that "nothing in the act itself indicates Texas was to be given any more consideration in this case than Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama."

In my judgment, to interpret this act which grants the land to Texas and Florida and withholds it from other Gulf states simply prolongs this costly and disquieting controversy.

A spokesman for Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La.) and Sen. John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.) indicated they would not push any legislation until the Supreme Court rules on an appeal for a rehearing.

They do not expect a court decision until after congress adjourns. This would postpone any legislative action until next January.

Name Director Of Northeast Nurse School

Dr. Anna Helen Gallagher, who has been in charge of Idaho State College's department of nursing since 1957, has been named director of Northeast Louisiana State College's new department of nursing, which opens next month.

Dr. Gallagher's appointment, effective Monday, was announced by Dr. George T. Walker, president of Northeast.

Mrs. Gallagher's appointment places her at the head of a department authorized earlier this year by the State Board of Education to provide a four-year program leading to a bachelor's degree in nursing.

Dr. Gallagher received her doctorate in education from the University of Pennsylvania in 1956 with a major in college administration. She had received her diploma in nursing from Philadelphia General Hospital School of Nursing.

Her doctoral dissertation was entitled "A Descriptive Study of a 26-Month Program for the Basic Preparation of Nurses." Her master's thesis was on the correlation of nursing arts and basic sciences.

Dr. Gallagher became director of the department of nursing at the Idaho college in June, 1957, and held that position until several months ago. Previously she had been associate director and instructor in charge of the nursing arts department at nursing schools in several hospitals.

She has also spent approximately five years as a staff nurse and head nurse in hospitals.

Bidding On Northeast Gym Slated

Sealed bids will be opened Monday, Aug. 22, for a $175,000 expansion of the Northeast Louisiana State College gymnasium.

Plans and specifications on the expansion, which will bring the gym to collegiate standards, were approved at a recent meeting of the State Board of Education.

Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. in 190 Administration Building on campus. Plans and specifications are available through the architect, Johns & Neel of Monroe.

The expansion, expected to be completed in January, will allow Northeast's basketball team to play its home games on campus for the first time. The expansion will include two practice courts and areas suitable for teaching modern dancing, handball, gymnastics and other activities.

In other construction developments, Northeast announced it is planning to move its present cafeteria building to a new location in mid-August. The structure will be placed on College Avenue between the Home Management House and the Stadium for use as a classroom building in the fall.

The college's new $200,000 air-conditioned cafeteria, now under construction, will open for the fall semester. It is designed to seat 450 persons.

The dining hall is part of a three-structure construction program at Northeast, which also includes a new men's and a new women's dormitory. The housing units are scheduled for occupancy by June of next year.

La. Forestry Association Opposes Dams

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI)—The Louisiana Forestry Association today vigorously opposed two proposed water impoundment projects in the state, including the two-state Toledo Bend Project.

Leon Walker of Taylor, president of the LFA, said forestry leaders believe the planned Toledo Bend reservoir, to be financed jointly by Texas and Louisiana, is "economically unsound."

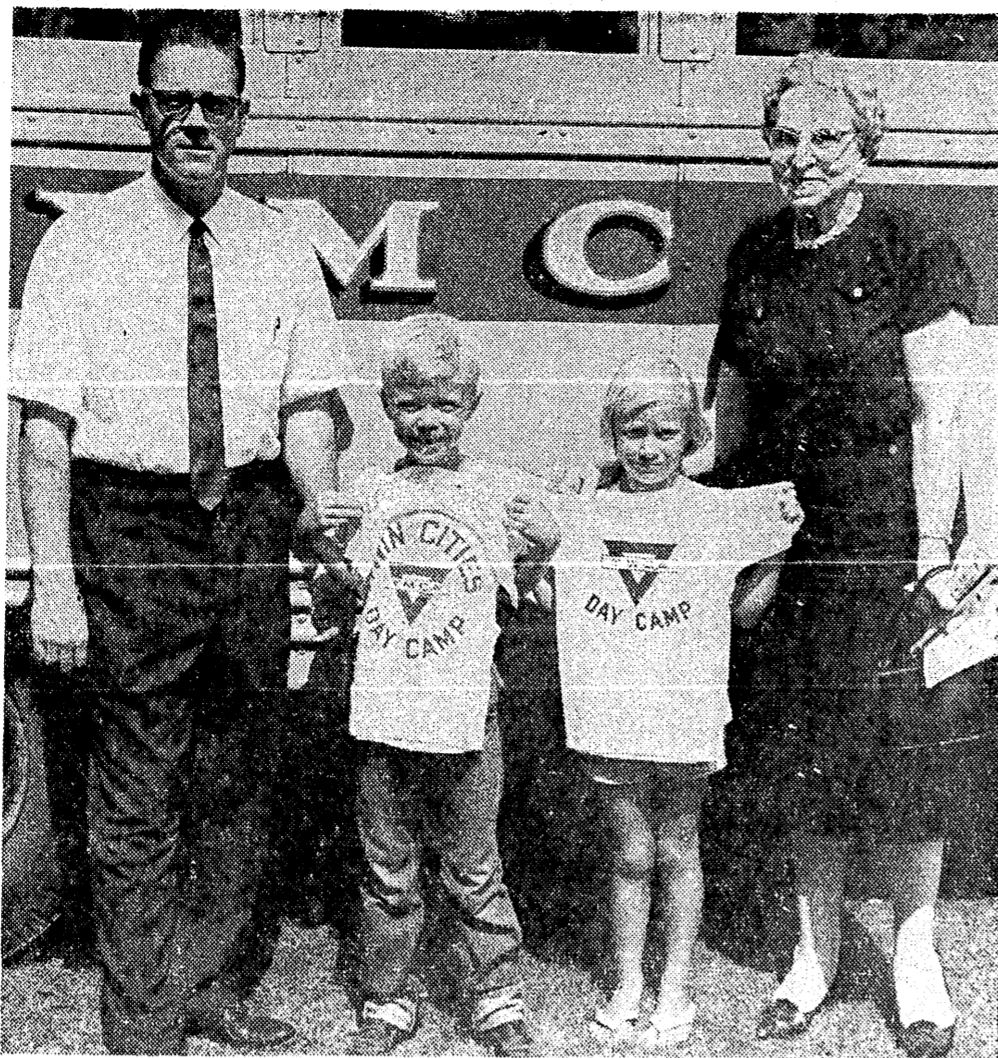

Both measures will go to the voters in November. The proposed Indian Creek Reservoir in Rapides parish "would tear Louisiana's only state forest to shreds," he warned.

Walker said the Toledo Bend project would take 198,000 acres of land out of production forever—"land that's becoming increasingly scarce in proportion to our booming population."

Second, he said, the project places an unrealistic value on recreational use. Lawmakers who pushed the proposal boomed Toledo Bend as a "sportsman's paradise." Louisiana legislators said also the project would pay for itself from the sale of water and electrical power.

IF ELECTED PRESIDENT

Kennedy Pledges Captive Nation Aid

By ALTER R. MEARS

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy promised Saturday that a Democratic administration never would abandon the peoples of captive nations behind the Iron Curtain.

He told immigrant Americans a Kennedy administration also would wage a "high-priority" campaign to amend immigration and naturalization law "to ban discrimination based on national origin."

The Democratic presidential nominee, his work-rest vacation at his summer home drawing to a close, voiced these promises in a drive to win the votes of immigrant and foreign-descended Americans.

He also announced he will visit Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her Hyde Park, N.Y., home next Sunday. Kennedy telephoned her Friday night to accept her invitation.

Mrs. Roosevelt backed two-time nominee Adlai E. Stevenson for the Democratic presidential nomination. After Kennedy won it, she said Stevenson should be secretary of state in a Democratic administration.

Sen. Stuart Symington, one of the three candidates who battled Kennedy for the nomination, arrived Saturday for a talk with the presidential candidate. Symington's visit ends the parade of Democratic leaders to the Kennedy vacation headquarters.

Symington and Kennedy will confer Sunday on defense and other issues. The Missouri senator will fly to Washington with Kennedy Sunday night for the congressional session that opens Monday.

Kennedy went sailing Saturday afternoon while Symington played a round of golf with Stephen E. Smith, Kennedy's brother-in-law. Kennedy told newsmen he wants no campaign help from the left-wing International Longshoremen and Warehousemen Union, or John St.

from Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa.

A newsmen asked Kennedy about reports from Honolulu that Jack Hall, ILWU leader there, had offered his union's support to Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the Republican presidential candidate.

"I am extremely glad neither Mr. Hall and his group nor Mr. Hogga and his group are supporting me."

Some 55 leaders of nationalities groups sat in chairs and on the floor, forming a circle around Kennedy while the shirt-sleeved candidate discussed immigration and foreign relations issues. The meeting was on a brick-floored patio in mild, sunny weather.

The session was Kennedy's third aimed at the nationalities group voters. He had a preliminary conference Tuesday with Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan.

Williams, chairman of the nationalities division of the Democratic National Committee, returned for the general talks Saturday with leaders representing 22 ethnic group organizations.

The Michigan governor told Kennedy the nationalities groups are "most enthusiastic" about his candidacy. He said they represent 21 million Americans of recent foreign descent.

Kennedy received Saturday honorary membership in the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts Junior Chamber, and the Mid-Cape Junior Chamber.

Warrant Issued In Assault Case

EDINBURG, Tex. (UPI)—Dist. Atty. Robert Lattimore of Hidalgo County waited in vain Saturday for the surrender of Rev. John F. Feit on a charge of attempted rape, and turned the warrant over to the sheriff for service.

Lattimore filed a charge of assault with intent to commit rape Friday against Feit, 27-year-old Roman Catholic priest, on a complaint signed by Maria Guerra, 20, a Pan American College coed here. She said the incident took place last March 23 as she prayed in Sacred Heart Church here. He withheld service of the warrant in the hope officials of the church would produce Feit voluntarily.

ASKS PUBLIC AID AT POLLS

Constitutional Proposal
Opposed By LSU Board

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana State University Board, fighting what it termed a "threat of political pressures, Saturday called for public opposition at the polls to a proposal that would pack the board with new members.

The constitutional proposal could revive at LSU the "instability and insecurity" which led to the Louisiana scandals before 1940, the board said in a resolution adopted unanimously.

Members unanimously elected John J. Doles, 65-year-old Plain Dealing banker and former state senator, chairman, to succeed Theodor Cangelosi of Baton Rouge. Doles first was appointed in 1939 and reappointed in 1950.

Percy Roberts, 62, Baton Rouge banking and insurance executive, was named vice chairman. Joseph C. LeSage Jr., Shreveport attorney, was named secretary to succeed Mrs. Margaret Dixon, Baton Rouge.

In other action, it approved this fiscal year's budgets of $22,720,653, up $1,916,376 compared with last year's operations, but $1,351,409 under what LSU asked the Legislature.

In the budget, LSUNO gets an extra $307,861 to start a junior year, while the LSU branch at Alexandria was allocated $333,600 for its first year starting this fall.

Average salaries of all faculty members on a nine-month schedule were raised from $7,392 to $8,014; those on a 12-month basis, from $9,253 to $9,823.

Three academic officers were appointed at LSUNO: Dr. Jack K. Carlton was named director of the division of sciences; Dr. George C. Branam, director of the division of sciences; Dr. John E. Akazan, director of the division of business administration.

The resolution opposing the constitutional proposal urged all alumni and "all friends of higher education" to campaign actively against the move.

The amendment, No. 1 on the Nov. 8 ballot, would add four appointed members to the 14-member board and cut present 14-year terms to nine years. No member who had served five years would be eligible for reappointment.

Legislative leaders of Gov. Jimmie H. Davis pushed for the proposal, calling for "new blood" on the LSU board. The governor said later it wasn't his idea.

The resolution said the proposed overhauling would mean "that each governor would appoint at least eight out of 18 members of the board and there can be no assurance future occupants of the office of governor might not be subjected to political pressures to assume control of the affairs of the university."

Present law, calling for 14-year overlapping terms, the board said makes sure no governor would normally appoint more than one-third the entire board.

The resolution said, "This proposed amendment was not suggested or endorsed by the university or this board, was repeatedly amended in its legislative consideration, has created widespread speculation as to its sponsorship and purpose, has directed unfavorable attention to the university, and has evoked unfavorable editorial comment as a serious threat to the future of the university."

The governor, it said, "has publicly stated on many occasions that this proposal is not an administration measure, nor under his sponsorship."

The board said the present system, adopted in 1940, was designed to discourage undesirable tampering with the university to free the university from the threat of being adversely affected every four years by the results of each gubernatorial election.

In other action, the board decided not to change its policy of allowing sororities to build their own homes, if they want. There are no sorority houses on the LSU campus.

Approved certification of 550 candidates for degrees in the summer commencement next Friday. Set up a broad new foreign student program, expanding on the older Pan American program, because students now arrive from all over the world.

Adopted a policy on placement of fire and extended insurance coverage, and authorized a representative committee of insurance agents bidding on LSU insurance to advise LSU can receive the most favorable blanket rate on both full coverage and deductible basis.

IN HER OWN HOME

Woman Attacked
In Early Morning

A 52-year-old West Monroe woman yesterday told police how she fought off an attack by a Negro youth who broke into her house about 2 a.m.

Mrs. Maude Spencer, who lives alone at 505 Vernon St., West Monroe, said she was chased through her house by the Negro who caught her as she got through her front door.

She reportedly screamed and fought back until her assailant fled.

West Monroe police, accompanied by other local law enforcement agencies were combing the Twin Cities late yesterday still searching for the Negro.

Mrs. Spencer said she arrived home from work shortly before the incident occurred. She works from 4 p.m. to 1 a.m. as a proof-reader for the Monroe Morning World.

"I had turned on the attic fan at home and was lying in the bed reading a book," Mrs. Spencer said. "It was getting a little cold and I got up to turn off the fan. That was when I first heard the noises."

She said the slight noises were coming from another bedroom in the rear of her house. "They would start and stop at regular intervals."

"After a while I went to the bathroom and turned on the light. When I looked into the bedroom I saw him already halfway through the window."

Mrs. Spencer said she screamed and ran through the house. She had just gotten through the front door when the Negro caught her. "It's not very clear, what happened then," she said. "I fought back and screamed until he ran off."

Mrs. Spencer reportedly ran back into her house and called the West Monroe police.

When officers arrived at the scene they found that the front screen door of the house had been locked and Mrs. Spencer apparently in a frantic attempt to escape her attacker had forced the door open without unlocking it.

"I don't remember how I got out," she said.

A physician treated Mrs. Spencer for shock shortly after the incident. She said late yesterday her arm was swollen where the Negro had grabbed her.

Mrs. Spencer said her side was very sore and she planned to see a doctor about it.

"I think I ran into a door," she said, "but I don't know. I don't remember very much, it all happened so fast."

Investigators at the scene found where the Negro had taken a wooden work bench from one side of the house and placed it under the rear bedroom window he reportedly entered. The window screen had been torn off, officers said.

Police said Mrs. Spencer told them the Negro ran up Vernon Street for about a block and turned south on 5th Street.

West Monroe patrol cars immediately blanketed the area but failed to find the attacker. Monroe police, Ouachita Parish sheriff's deputies and the state police were also alerted, but failed to

CAMPAIGNING SHIFTS

Congress Facing Stormy Session

WASHINGTON (AP)—The 1960 presidential campaign shifts into high gear—and into the Capitol—Monday with the return of Congress for what shapes up as its stormiest partisan performance.

The very presence in the Senate chamber of rival candidates for the presidency—Vice President Richard M. Nixon as presiding officer, and Sen. John F. Kennedy on the floor—pointed up the heavy political overtones.

And, if that does not constitute enough of a challenge to sober deliberation, the job of scheduling legislation will be in the hands of Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, Kennedy's vice presidential running mate.

Add to the lineup Sens. Henry R. Jackson (Wash.), the Democratic national chairman, and Thurston B. Morton (Ky.) his Republican opposite number, and it's anybody's guess what explosions may occur before Labor Day.

Democratic talk of increased spending for defense and to spur the domestic economy and Republican demands for Johnson to "deliver" on Democratic civil rights promises provided only part of the preliminary political dynamite to be set off in due course.

Sharp differences on how much to raise the minimum wage, over medical care to the elderly, housing, aid to education and other campaign issues put a big question mark over what can be enacted in a session both sides hoped could be concluded in 24 working days.

Even with late night and Saturday sessions, the time seems perhaps too short for the disposal of the business left over when Congress quit for the national political conventions.

And that doesn't allow for partisan sniping across the aisles that divide the senators by parties or for new proposals born in the rival party platforms.

Nor does it allow for action on what Nixon recently forecast would be a series of vetoes by President Eisenhower if Democrats enact what he called "massive spending measures" not accompanied by the taxes to pay for them.

That would mean keeping Congress in session while the Democratic leadership decided whether to attempt to override.

The House doesn't even reconvene until Aug. 15—a week from Monday—and bills providing federal aid for school construction and housing are tied up in its rules committee until it can be persuaded to let them go.

The first big fight in the Senate likely will come on Democratic efforts to raise the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour—the House raised it from $1 to $1.15—and to expand its coverage. Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) has served notice he has a big stack of amendments on which he will seek votes.

Then, there is the almost certain row over proposals to provide medical care for persons over 65. The Democrats would tie such care in with Social Security deductions, while Republicans generally favor federal contributions to the states for this purpose.

Republicans are trying to put the Democrats, particularly Vice Presidential Nominee Johnson on the spot by calling for action on civil rights through a bill based on the new Democratic platform.

Even if half of the Southern Democrats suddenly developed lockjaw, every one knows the other half could easily keep such a bill in the Senate Judiciary Committee or blocked by talk on the floor a long time past Labor Day.

Sen. Morton acknowledged that Republicans simply "haven't got the troops" to override efforts to block either a civil rights bill by Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) embracing the Democratic platform, or another by Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) based on the Republican plank.

While Keating, Javits and others are goading the Democrats on civil rights, Johnson and Kennedy are trying to lure the Republicans into asking for more defense funds to support their view that defenses are threatening to lag behind the Soviet Union in the years ahead.

There is talk that, to counter this, Eisenhower will send a message to the new session either asking more funds or authority to transfer previous appropriations from one project to another to put greater emphasis where he feels the need is the greatest.

Both Kennedy and Nixon looked to the House to prepare the way for joint nationwide television debates during the campaign. The Senate has passed a bill to waive a provision of existing law which might require networks to provide equal time for fringe candidates if they make time available to the major parties.

The Senate has yet to act on a House-passed bill providing for suspension and forfeiture of station licenses to crack down on payola and quiz show rigging on radio and TV. A Senate Commerce subcommittee will conduct hearings on the proposal starting next Wednesday.

2 Negro Youths Being Held For Theft In Store

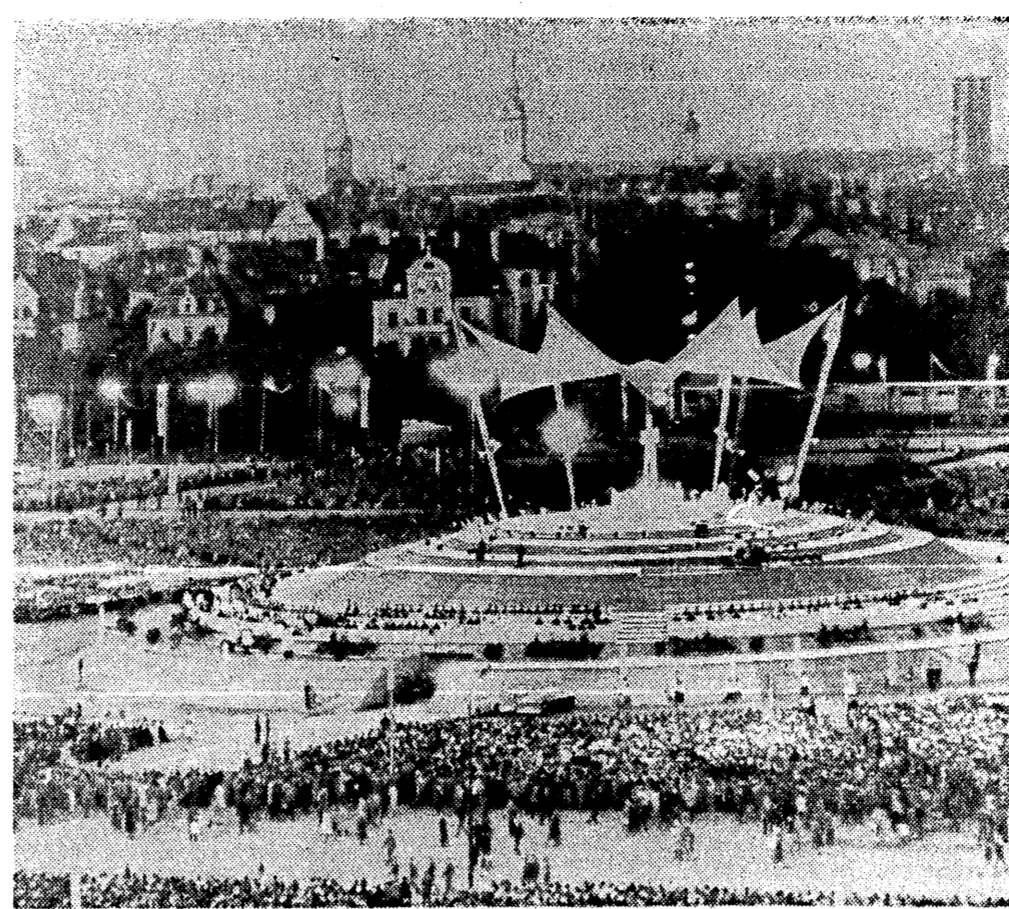

Two 15-year-old Negro youths were arrested by Monroe police at a downtown store yesterday afternoon and charged with shoplifting after they reportedly took several small items valued at about $6 from the place of business.

The boys, both of West Monroe, were turned over to juvenile authorities, who were holding them at the Ouachita Parish detention home.

Officers were notified by the store's officials that they were holding the two youths after they reportedly caught them in the act.

Police also noted that the boys had several pairs of socks from nearby stores in their possession, but denied stealing them.

Investigators said personnel at the second store did not know if the boys had paid for the socks or not.

AN ESTIMATED 300,000 pilgrims surrounded the golden-canopied, pedestal altar at St. Theresa's Meadows in Munich, Germany, to hear an address by the Archbishop of Berlin. The Archbishop, Julius Cardinal Doepfner, addressed the "Statio Orbis," Roman Catholics' great eucharistic common celebration. Bells of Munich's 103 churches tolled to summon pilgrims to listen to the prelate who was sounding the keynote of the 37th Eucharistic Congress. (AP Wirephoto)

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS

Highway Opening Crashing Success

By JOHN GALE
ROME (AP)—Rome's new 12-million-dollar Olympic Highway system was formally opened Saturday and immediately turned into a pandemonium of honking horns, crashed cars and angry shouting.

The first crash occurred within minutes after an official autocade had started down the system's flag-lined main artery, the Via Olimpica, linking the city's main sports stadiums.

Fenders were dented and scratched. Drivers exchanged insults in loud and belligerent tones and Rome was back to normal. For in the city which made chariot racing famous, driving a car is strictly the survival of the fittest.

With the autocade proceeding at a sedate 40 miles an hour, trouble built up behind.

Traffic jammed at intersections. While-uniformed police struggled vainly to prevent hundreds of Romans—out for a Saturday morning drive—from joining the official party.

No sooner had the road been opened than some sections were promptly closed. Scaffolding was wheeled into position at points where the Olympic decorations are still incomplete. Squads of workmen finished minor jobs on the road surface itself.

The official opening ceremony took place in a blaze of local controversy. The Communist party newspaper, L'Unita, Saturday called the new super-highway a "myriad of restrictions" and said these would slow traffic.

There is a speed of 40 miles an hour on the expressway but no other obvious hindrance to motorists. Saturday's jams occurred mainly at points where the new road links with older sections that have been widened and resurfaced for Olympic traffic.

Along the Via Olimpica are two tunnels and a total of 14 underpasses and bridges, one with a panoramic view of the Tiber River.

Benigno Zaccagnini, minister of public works, cut a tape in the red, white and green colors of Italy to open the Olympic Highway.

The symbolic gesture also opened a larger complex of link roads and overpasses which will keep Olympic traffic moving and out of the congested heart of the city.

Missing from the formalities was Giuseppe Togni, former works minister who conceived the program. In the grand Italian manner, he lost his job in a recent government crisis.

Pair Arrested For Burglary Of Teens' Club

Monroe police yesterday arrested two teenage Negroes and charged them with the burglary of Green's Teenage Club, 1607 DeSiard St.

The youths, ages 14 and 15, reportedly entered the club Monday night broke into a pinball machine and took an undetermined amount of change.

They were also accused of taking approximately $3 from a cash box in the building.

Walter Brisco, who operates the club, told police the boys stayed around his place quite a lot.

The boys were turned over to juvenile authorities and held at the Ouachita Parish detention home.

Monkeys Bolt Cages In Zoo

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—The monkey business wasn't quite over Saturday at the Vilas Park Zoo despite the fact that hunger got the best of some of them.

Thirty-six Rhesus monkeys bolted their cage Thursday night by more or less picking the lock and 15 of the frisky fellows continued to frolic in nearby trees and bushes Saturday.

Zoo officials got 12 of the $35-a-piece monkeys back by putting food in large trap boxes.

Man Arrested On DWI Charge

A 24-year-old West Monroe man was arrested by Monroe officers early yesterday morning and charged with counts of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating beverages and reckless driving.

Glen A. Silman, 503 Woodrow St., was apprehended about 2 a.m. as he left a drive-in restaurant on South 2nd Street in Monroe.

Silman was free after posting a $438 bond. His trial has been scheduled for August 17 in Monroe city court.

Orleans Civil Service Head Claims 'Firng'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—The head of the city civil service department said today that he was not retiring because of bad health, but because he was fired to make room for resigned Superintendent of Police Provosty Dayries.

Col. Joseph S. Tate wrote Mayor deLesseps Morrison asking him to correct the "impression created by your quoted press comments" that Tate was retiring because he was in ill health and couldn't pass a physical examination required by the department.

"As practically everyone knows, there has been no physical examination required" in the department and that in the past five years he has taken only 20 of his allotted 98 days of sick leave for "a sprained ankle, two boils and a couple of colds in the head."

Col. Tate said that on Wednesday, the day Dayries resigned from the police force, he was told by Civil Defense Director Brig. Gen. Robert V. Marais that he must resign in order to make a job for Dayries.

Tate told Morrison that "your quoted references to my health could obviously militate against my securing other employment."

Funeral Held At Arlington For Admiral

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Funeral services will be held Monday in Arlington National Cemetery for Rear Adm. Evander Wallace Sylvester, director of the Mariners Museum at Newport News, Va., and an authority on Naval ship design.

The 61-year-old Sylvester, a native of Alexandria, La., died Thursday at the Bethesda, Md., Naval medical center.

Adm. Sylvester served as a Naval Attaché in London during World War II and studied British ship design. He was appointed to the National Defense Research Committee, the group which mobilized scientific talent to deal with combat problems.

He was awarded the Legion of Merit twice for war service. Sylvester retired from the Navy in 1955 to take over the Mariners Museum.

Survivors include his widow, two daughters, two brothers, both of whom are naval officers, and four grandchildren, all of Washington, D. C.

The family has requested contributions to the American Cancer Society instead of flowers.

LeVasseur Rites Scheduled Today

Funeral services are scheduled today for Mrs. Jewel LeVasseur, 56, of 805 Splane Dr., West Monroe, who died in a Shreveport hospital Friday.

The Revs. A. T. Mitchell and Charles Littleton will officiate at the services at 3 p.m. in the chapel of Peter's Funeral Home.

Survivors include her husband, E. N. LeVasseur, West Monroe; one daughter, Miss Ernestine LeVasseur, Alexandria; two sons, Johnny W. LeVasseur, U. S. Air Force in Japan, and George D. LeVasseur, U. S. Air Force in Massachusetts; seven sisters, Mrs. Alice Fisher, West Monroe, Mrs. Laura Edmonds, Shreveport, Mrs. Sallie Dunn and Mrs. Willie Slack, both of Springhill, Mrs. Sidney Morgan, Mrs. Gusie Haynes and Mrs. Edna Mae Morgan, all of Shogaloo; three brothers, P. D. Mitchell, Monroe, Oscar Mitchell, West Monroe, and J. P. Mitchell, Delhi.

Funeralbearers will be J. E. Muckleroy, Max Wroten, George Whitlow, Allen Corbin, Albert E. Spurlock and K. H. Franks Jr.

Set Guidance Short Course At La. Tech

RUSTON (Special)—Because of the increased demand for trained personnel in the field of guidance, a short course on "Organization and Administration of Guidance" will be conducted at Louisiana Tech again this summer.

Sponsored by the School of Education at Tech, the two-week session for high school guidance counselors will get underway Monday and continue through August 19. A similar course was held at the college last summer. Instructor for the course will be Dr. Wilbur L. Bergeron, associate professor of psychology who also teaches guidance courses. A number of guidance specialists from off the campus are scheduled to speak to the class. "The short course is Tech's effort toward the improvement of guidance personnel and services in the public schools of the state," Dr. Bergeron pointed out. Limited to 25 students, enrollment was completed for the short course early this week. The course carried three hours of graduate credit. Classes will be held from 9 until 12 and from 1 until 3 Monday through Friday in the college's air conditioned Adams Cafeteria.

Tech has recently added several new courses in the area of guidance. The college now offers all the work necessary for a person to meet the State Board of Education certification requirement as a counselor.

Pilgrims Victims

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—Police said Saturday pickpockets have been victimizing from 30 to 40 pilgrims daily at the World Eucharistic Congress here. Along with local pickpockets, police have arrested 12 foreigners. One was a Brazilian woman who tried her skill on a plainclothes policeman inside Munich Cathedral.

Africa In Perspective

Orderly Transition In Some Parts; Chaos In Others

Editor's Note — orderly transition in some parts, raging chaos in others—but everywhere an irridia, by the liberals of New York and London, the propagandists of the twentieth century. That's Africa today, a sensitive neutralists of New Delhi, teeming stage of struggle, aspiration, and clashing loyalties, with all the world looking on. In the following article, an Associated Press reporter sums up his findings after an extensive tour of the continent.

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Writer

In the history of men and nations, Africa slept late, very late. It awakened only yesterday with the sun high in the sky. Like most people who oversleep, it got up with a jolt and rushed out of bed with a frantic need to catch up. Africa capsulizes the bookshelves of history into one hurried paragraph and defines the law of evolution for nations. Africa has no time for evolution or natural birth.

New nations are being born overnight, with all the dangers of forced delivery to both mother and child.

There is no parallel in history to match the awakening of this huge continent of 250,000,000 people, to whom the wheel was a novelty only yesterday and freedom a novelty today.

We might have had something like it if Europe, by speeding up the film of time to a crazy comic pace, had moved in a single generation from the ancient wandering Gauls to De Gaulle, from the Celts to Macmillan, with no Voltaire or Magna Carta in between. We might have had something like it in North America, if George Washington and Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson had been the sons of illiterate Indians.

The paradox of Africa is that it must leap directly from the stone age to the atomic age. The tragedy of Africa is that it must do this self-consciously in a glass tower.

Each new development is a lightning bolt over its shoulder.

But the most striking thing about Africa to the visitor is its hurried compression of time.

Less than a week after independence in the Congo, law and order collapsed in a chain reaction of terror, murder and rape. The black man turns on the white man his former ruler. The black man also turns on other black men, exploding tribal feuds that were never settled in 80 years of Belgian colonialism.

Why the terror and chaos?

Because an area 80 times larger than Belgium and one-third the size of the United States suddenly became independent without the least understanding of the world. No one had really prepared it for freedom, neither the Belgian colonialists nor the Congolese nationalists.

Among millions of illiterate Congolese, there was the notion firmly rooted by ignorance and wishful thinking that independence meant the gates of heaven would be open. Independence, many thought, would mean that the black man would inherit the white man's business, car, home, even his wife.

Independence, thought the native army, would mean that every soldier would start making much more money and every private would be well on his way to becoming a general. Less than a week after independence, the Congolese army mutinied and went out on rampage.

The terror of the Congo was entirely predictable but still the colony moved relentlessly toward independence and no one seemed able to stop or even slow it down. Africa contains many other examples of the paradox of compressed time.

Telephone service in Tanganyika is interrupted because elephants knock over the poles. In the suburbs of the modern city of Durban, South Africa, warring tribes still fight with spears, clubs, knives and the evil spirits enlisted by opposing witch doctors.

Lions and giraffes still stop traffic in the suburbs of Nairobi, a modern cosmopolitan city of glass buildings, and a modern cosmopolitan white woman, educated in the best schools of Europe, says she's less fearful of finding a leopard in her garden at night than an unexpected native.

In the Congo, there is a week's delay in collecting the results of the first national elections — a mass pin-up contest, in which the largely illiterate electorate voted for the picture of their favorite candidate. Thousands of marked ballots were lost because a boat carrying them sank in crocodile-infested river, many other votes were stolen, burned, slashed or just switched by warring tribes swooping down on the polling places.

Near the base of beautiful, snow-capped Kilimanjaro, where rich white hunters from the cafe society of Mollwood, New York, London and Paris stalk their game, native cattle die of disease. But the native farmers refuse to allow the government to dip the cattle in chemicals for fear they'll become bewitched.

In Kenya, the Masai tribe still largely exists on a diet of cow blood and milk curdled with urine. In many areas of black Africa, native girls are still subjected to dangerous, painful circumcision on the theory that a killed sexual appetite reduces infidelity.

In many country and urban areas, modern educated Africans still pay a bridal price of 11 cattle for their wives.

In the rising racial tension of South Africa, white men are carrying guns and at the first sign of trouble farmers herd their families into the towns the way American pioneers used to race for the nearest cavalry post ahead of an Indian attack. In the renewed racial tension of Kenya, white men and white women carry guns again.

In Ghana, President Kwame Nkrumah returns from a meeting of the British Commonwealth in London, where he played a highly articulate role. A white lamb is killed in gratitude for his safe journey.

In humid, exotic Dar es Salaam, the modern capital of Tanganyika, there is a big ornate welcome for Julius Nyerere, the literate, urbane young politician of 38, who is expected to become his country's first prime minister. He is returning from a post tour of the United States and among those welcoming him home is his mother, who wears no shoes.

In Nairobi, nationalist and labor leader Tom Mboya, who studied at Oxford, meets with assorted constituents in his modern offices. One constituent is a tall, sinewy old warrior with misty eyes.

He wears a skull cap and a white gown under an ancient British army coat of khaki. The tops of his ears are pierced to hold large rings and the lobes have huge holes from which silver trinkets dangle. He is barefoot and carries a black ebony club and a long hand broom of animal hairs for swatting flies.

In the Central African Republic, the late Barthelmy Boganda, prime minister, used to charm his European visitors with his culture. Then, he enjoyed seeing their expression change as he casually remarked, "My father, you know, was a cannibal."

In many places in Africa, leadership is falling to or being grabbed by a small intellectual elite who are usually the first generation in their families and their countries to have been educated. Illiteracy remains staggeringly high.

In the entire native population of 2,700,000 in Tanganyika, where independence is only a year or two away, there are no African lawyers, only 15 doctors, 70 college graduates and 214 students now in college.

In the entire native population of 13,000,000 in the Belgian Congo, which became independent June 30, there isn't a single official previously trained for high office, not a single lawyer or doctor or engineer and only 16 college graduates.

The statistics can be repeated in many places in Africa and they are repeated night and day by the white settlers of Kenya, fighting a losing battle against African independence, and the Afrikaners of South Africa, fighting a rigid battle against equality for Africans.

Ready or not, Africa sweeps toward independence with an overwhelming, increasing force. Ten years ago, the continent had only four independent nations — Ethiopia, Liberia, the Union of South Africa and Egypt. Today there are 14. Soon there will be more.

Eventually Africa may produce some 40 independent nations, and each joins the United Nations, they would hold one-third of its seats.

White resistance to the emergence of the black man varies with the depth of the white man's entrenchment and the size of the native population outnumbering him.

The least resistance and the least racial tension have occurred in Tanganyika, where the blacks outnumber the whites 430 to 1. There was more resistance in the Belgian Congo, where the blacks outnumber the whites 130 to 1. There was and is still more in Kenya, where the ratio is 93 to 1, where the white man has dug in deep.

And finally, the greatest fortress of white resistance in all of Africa—and surely it will be the last to fall—is South Africa. Here, the white man tells you, with almost as much emphasis as if he were claiming a majority, that the ratio is only three negroes for every white man.

Here, white men have lived for 300 years, have built the strongest, wealthiest nation in Africa. But the native in South Africa can not vote or join a union or strike or hold a skilled job in a white area (black areas produce little demand for skilled workers) or own his own home in the new housing locations or use the white man's elevator or bus or theater or park bench or wash room or restaurant or even the same counter at the post office.

He must get the white man's permission to travel, to change jobs, to visit his wife (if they work in different areas) or just be out on the streets after 11 at night, have and be ready to show the first cop who demands it his passbook of identification.

Ironically, in touring black Africa from the equator south, I heard the word "revolution" used only twice.

Once was in the highlands of Kenya where a white settler said he would, if he had enough followers, lead a revolution against the approach of black rule in Kenya. He is not likely to.

In Johannesburg, South Africa, several Negro students and teachers said, "If the guns come from the north, we'll lead a revolution." They are not likely to—not in the immediate future.

The Afrikaner government of South Africa remains remarkably rigid on apartheid. It remains confident despite the riots of some months ago, that the black man in South Africa will not revolt.

A visitor exposed to the rising hate, the tension, the widening schism between black and white in South Africa is not so sure. Somehow, one feels, the "wind of change" sweeping Africa will sweep all the way to Capetown some day and when it does, the rigid Afrikaner government, because it's so rigid, will come down in a thousand pieces.

Everywhere in Africa, even where he has been told independence is on the way, the black man is increasingly impatient. Even in Tanganyika, where there is little tension and no segregation.

There the British are preparing the natives for independence in a remarkable plan of gradual stages.

Time Fails To Stop Libel Suit In Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The New York Times failed in an attempt Friday to turn aside libel suits brought by three Montgomery city commissioners seeking $500,000 each.

Attorneys for the newspaper contended the Times could not be sued in Alabama because it does not do business in the state on a regular basis.

But Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones ruled that commissioners could bring suit in a state court.

He said he based his ruling on a finding that the Times does do business in Alabama, and the fact that the newspaper, in effect, admitted it does business in Alabama by coming into a state court to contest the case.

The commissioners sued the Times over an advertisement which the newspaper carried seeking funds for legal defense of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Atlanta, a leader in the integration movement.

King was brought to trial on charges of falsely reporting his state income tax in 1958. A jury of 12 white men found him innocent.

The commissioners charged that the advertisement damaged their reputations by implying they were derelict in their duties.

Fields Sets Opening Of New Branch

Field's, long-established Monroe store specializing in ladies apparel, will open a new suburban shop in the Twin City Shopping Center, 2200 Block Louisville, 9 a.m., Monday.

This was announced yesterday by Morris Blumenthal, manager of Field's, who said that Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard will cut a ribbon officially opening the store.

The shop which is 25 feet by 100 feet is of very modernistic design.

And fixtures and decorations inside feature a pattern of colors which flow gently from one hue to another.

Gold, white and gray are the basic design colors. The rug and cornice are in gold.

"The main color theme is actually gold," said Blumenthal.

Wall colors change from one department to another. In lingerie department the wall is white, while the background for the dress coats and suits department is light lilac, and the background for sportswear section is gold-green.

"We have an inlaid harlequin pattern on the wall above the cornice, and we have a magnificent chandelier with 18 lights which is 32 inches in diameter."

Blumenthal said, adding that it is in gold, white and gray with light globes in a hurricane pattern.

Another eye-catching fixture in the store is a fur case of solid glass framed with gold anodized aluminum. It is 48 inches wide, and 2 1/2 feet deep.

Mrs. Merle Tippit will be manager of the new store, which is located in a shopping center where ample car parking facilities are available.

Field's main store, located at 310 DeSiard, was founded in 1929 by the late Abe Blumenthal, father of Morris Blumenthal. Following his death, Morris' mother took over management of the store, and continued in that post until 1957. It was that year that the present manager assumed his duties.

The new store will feature a fine line of women's apparel, dresses, coats, suits, furs, sportswear, lingerie, costume jewelry and bags, as well as formal, cocktail dresses, leather coats and rain wear.

The management extended an invitation to all of Field's wonderful friends to come by and visit us during our formal opening."

Sitters, Stores In 'Stand-Off'

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP)—Negro youngsters seeking food service at five Oklahoma City eating establishments Saturday found their sit-in demonstrations had turned into a stand-off.

Four groups ranging from about 30 to 50 each, marched together from the Calvary Baptist church toward downtown Oklahoma City. As the group dropped out at the places assigned them, they found entrances barred.

Some stood under a blazing sun in 90-degree temperatures. Only in two groups could get inside air-conditioned buildings. A fifth group of about 50 youngsters was driven to a cafeteria in northeast Oklahoma City. They also were kept outside.

CENSUS BUREAU REVEALS

Facts And Figures On 'Good Old Days'

By G. K. HODENFIELD
WASHINGTON (AP)—The good old days? Well, maybe they were, and maybe they weren't.

In terms of the weekly grocery bill, 1900 was a wonderful year. Pork chops were 12 cents a pound, and potatoes were 10 pounds for 14 cents. But a factory worker had a 59-hour week and was paid 21 1/2 cents an hour. A farm worker got about $14 a month, plus board.

In 1956, pork chops were 87 cents a pound, and potatoes were 10 pounds for 57 cents. But a factory worker had a 39.8-hour work week and got $2.07 an hour. A farm worker got $128 a month, plus board.

These facts and figures and many others are set forth in a fascinating book put out by the U. S. Census Bureau Saturday. It's called "Historical Statistics of the United States, Colonial Times to 1957." Its 800 pages contain 8,200 different sets of statistics. It took two years to compile, and it takes almost that long to read it.

About all the book proves, really, is that 20th century life could be wonderful if we had today's income, the prices of 1900, and the income taxes of 1913.

In 1913, the year the income tax began, a married couple with two children paid only $10 in federal income taxes on a salary of $5,000. In 1945, the same couple would have paid $755; in 1957, $520.

Everything is bigger—but not necessarily better—these days.

Take the national debt. In 1900 it was about 1 1/4 billion dollars, or $16.60 for every man, woman and child. By 1957, we had pushed it up to 270 1/2 billion dollars, or $1,580 per capita. As of last Tuesday the debt was more than 283 billion dollars, or $1,600 per capita.

It's enough to make you weep for the good old days of 1834 and 1835, when the national debt was only $38,000, or a fifth of a cent per capita.

In terms of life expectancy, we're a lot better off than grandpa. A male child born in 1900 could reasonably expect to live 46.3 years, a female child 43.3 years. A baby boy born in 1956, however, had a life expectancy of 69.6 years, a baby girl 73 years. That gives a man 23 more years in which to wonder why the railroads laid 79 million cross-ties in 1917, and only 25 million in 1957.

We're healthier, that's for sure. The annual death rate from diphtheria dropped from 463 per one million of population in 1900 to only one per million in 1956. The death rate from tuberculosis has dropped from 1,944 to 84 and from influenza and pneumonia from 2,022 to 262.

And we must be wealthier. In 1900 there was about two billion dollars worth of money in circulation, $27 for each man, woman and child. In 1957 there were more than 31 billion dollars in circulation, and every man, woman and child had $180. Didn't they?

And maybe we're smarter. In 1900, public school pupils attended school an average of 99 days a year, in 1956 the average was 158 days. In 1900, only 6 per cent of the 17-year-olds graduated from high school, in 1956 it was 62 per cent. In 1900, only 29,000 Americans got college degrees, in 1957 the total was 405,000.

But we're mixed up, too. In 1904, 49,622 persons were admitted to mental hospitals. In 1956 such admissions had climbed to 296,359, and

Bitter Campaign Now In Progress Over Capital City

By WARD T. SIMS
JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—One of this state's bitterest campaigns comes to a climax Tuesday. At stake is the future of this once-rare gold camp as Alaska's capital city.

Voters will decide in a state primary whether Juneau should give way to the Cook Inlet-Railbelt area as capital.

The campaign has been one in which party lines vanished. It resulted in deep rifts between regions of the state and it set Democrats against Democrats and Republicans against Republicans.

Almost overlooked in the emotional furor over the initiative to move the capital were party nominations for the U.S. Senate, the U.S. House of Representatives and 50 seats in the 60-seat Legislature.

Sen. E. L. Bartlett, a Democrat who had served as Alaska's delegate in Congress since 1945, under territorial status, is unopposed for the nomination of his party.

Bartlett was elected to the Senate for a two-year term in 1958 after statehood for Alaska was assured.

Seeking the Republican nomination are Lawrence M. Bratton, a Fairbanks surveyor, and Lee L. McKinley, a Palmer dentist.

Williams Rites

Scheduled Today

Funeral services will be held Sunday for Zane Williams, 70, West Monroe resident, who died Saturday morning in a Pineville hospital after a long illness.

The Revs. Arlie Bratton and A. T. Mitchell will officiate at the services to be held at the Belview Baptist Church near Columbia at 2 p.m. Burial will be at the Old Bethel Cemetery, near Clark, under the direction of Riser and Son Funeral Home of Columbia.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Martha Williams, West Monroe; one sister, Miss Claude Williams, Norco; four brothers, W. G. Williams, Jim Williams and Gus Williams, all of Castor, and Altha Williams, New Mexico.

The body will remain at the funeral home until time of the services.

Rep. Ralph J. Rivers, the Democratic incumbent, faces the challenge of David N. Beyer, a Kenai hotel operator, in Rivers' bid for another term.

Three men seek the Republican nomination for Rivers' seat. They are William C. Haugegard, a Sitka lawyer; R. L. Reittig, an Anchorage accountant; and Jack Ryan, a Fairbanks newspaperman.

The move to take the capital from Juneau had its roots in the Anchorage area. The backers of the proposal claim Juneau, located in the southeastern panhandle, is too far removed from the heavily populated Anchorage-Fairbanks areas.

They also claim that Juneau is too inaccessible. The capital can be reached by water only during the summer months. There are no road links with the capital, other than by passenger car ferry. On occasions, heavy clouds and fog have sealed off the Juneau Airport to air traffic.

The pro-Juneauites, of course, have denied every claim. Voters of Juneau approved a one million dollar bond issue to buy some eight acres of land for the state as a capital site encompassing now a total of 29 acres.

But the backbone of the Juneau argument has been cost. The new state's financial problems prohibit the expenditure of state funds on such a thing as a capital move, they contended.

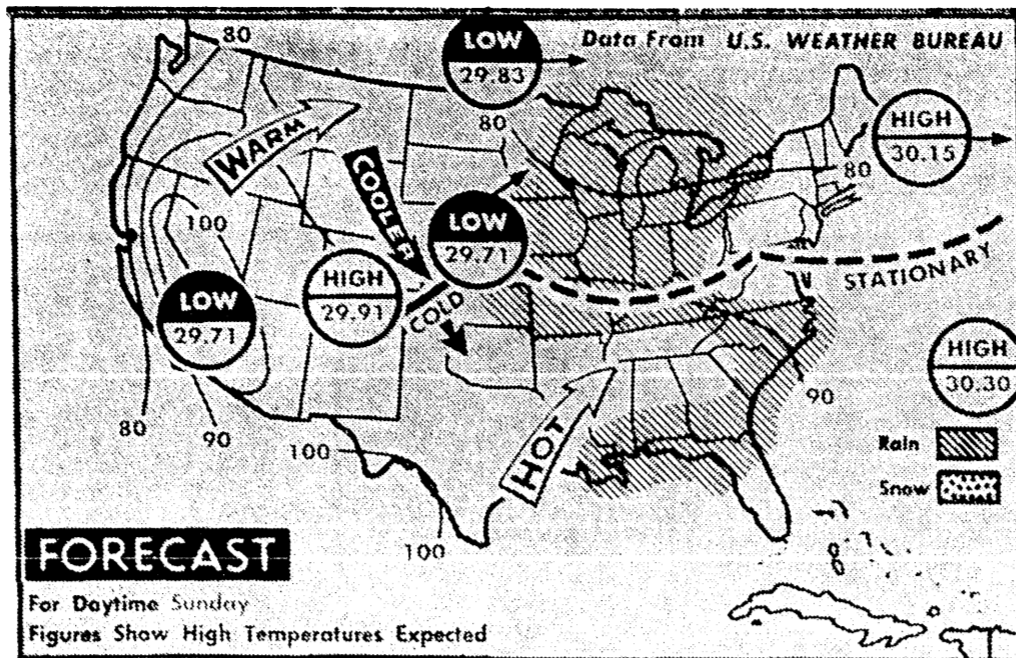

Backers of the initiative deny it is an attempt by Anchorage to pick off the capital. They point out that the initiative leaves selection of the actual site in the hands of a five-man committee to be selected by Gov. William A. Egan. The capital would be moved by Jan. 1, 1965.

Egan, a Democrat, and the other top two members of the party, Sens. Bartlett and Ernest Gruening, have announced their opposition to the capital move.

Should the capital initiative win approval—only a bare majority is required to pass an initiative—a long court fight is in prospect.

Because Juneau is capital by constitutional provision, anti-move forces say it cannot be moved by law, that it takes a constitutional amendment.

Because of this, pro-Juneauites claim, it would require a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature and a majority vote of the people. That is their ace in the hole, if they lose Tuesday.

SHOWERS and thundershowers are forecast Sunday from the Great Lakes to the Tennessee Valley, including the middle Mississippi Valley. The Gulf states also will have thundershowers along with hot, humid weather. (AP Wirephoto Map)

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The government Saturday banned the export of vegetables from Formosa for three months to prevent a food shortage from the recent typhoon and floods. Vegetable crops, a part of Formosa's vital export trade, were badly damaged.

Board Rejects Transfer Bids In Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The Little Rock School Board Saturday formally rejected the applications of 39 Negro students for transfers to all-white junior high schools.

The board had announced previously it did not plan to extend desegregation to the junior high level this fall. Thirteen Negroes have been assigned to once-white Central and Hall high schools for the term which starts Sept. 6. Seven were assigned to Central and five to Hall in earlier board action. In announcing the rejection of junior high applications, the school board said it had reassigned Everett Dixon Morehead from all-Negro Horace Mann High to Central, making a total of 13 Negroes in Little Rock's only two integrated schools. The board said 33 other Negro high school students had applied for transfers to predominantly white schools, but most of them failed to show up for scheduled hearings and no approval was granted. Several of these will be heard at an Aug. 25 board meeting. Assignments and rejections were made under an Arkansas pupil placement law which is being challenged in U.S. District Court. Negro plaintiffs in the case want the school board to assign all students according to racial area, without regard for race.

Five Children Leap To Safety As Home Burns

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Five Farmland, Ind., children Saturday jumped from a second-story window into the arms of Tommy Speranza, 16, their uncle, while fire swept the home they were visiting.

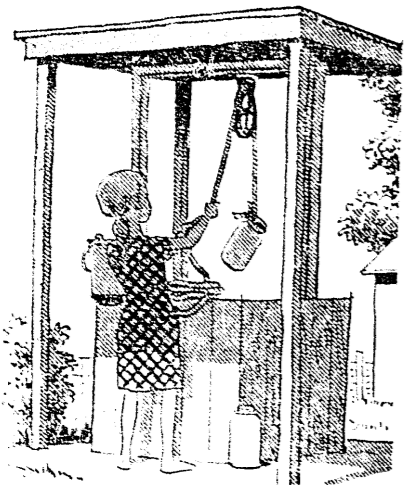

Two of the children—Gordon Rensik, 11, and his brother, Jeffrey, 7—were hospitalized with first-degree burns. Their mother, Irene Rensik and her infant son, Robin, escaped down a stairway. Marsha Black of Syracuse, N.Y., and her infant daughter, Chris Ann, and Tommy's sister, Kay, 14, also used the stairway. The nine-room home was owned by Mr. and Mrs. John Speranza, grandparents of the Black and Rensik children. They had left earlier in the day to open their dairy store, located nearby. Authorities said Tommy led the five children to a window, kicked it out and dropped to the ground, then caught them as they jumped. In addition to Gordon and Jeffrey, they were Terry, 3, Tommy, 5, and Ricky, 18 months.

Mental Illness Part Two

Pills vs The Couch

EDITOR'S NOTE — The new psychiatric drugs have achieved spectacular success in calming disturbed patients and so eased some of the burdens on mental hospital staffs. But they have not proved anything like the final answer to mental illness. What's the outlook today?

Second of four articles.

By ROGER GREENE
Associated Press Writer

With vast patience and skill, thousands of American scientists are working quietly on the age-old riddle of mental illness.

Exciting new clues are constantly arising.

At times the researchers—employing tools ranging from ultra-modern chemical warfare agents to exotic drugs used by Mexican Indians before Columbus discovered America—appear on the verge of a major breakthrough.

Always, so far, the ultimate answer has eluded them.

In the background of the scientists' search—and often flaring into controversy—is the perennial argument of Couch vs. Pill.

Is mental derangement caused by deep-rooted emotional or psychic wounds, perhaps dating back to some long-forgotten incident in childhood? Exponents of the Freudian "couch" school of psychoanalysis say it is.

Or is it caused by a chemical disturbance affecting brain and nervous system? Disciples of the metabolic or "pill" school of thought contend that some flaw in body chemistry is a basic cause of mental illness.

To support their thesis, they cite Richard von Krafft-Ebing's celebrated discovery in 1807 that syphilis causes paresis by an invasion of spirochetes into the brain.

Krafft-Ebing's finding marked the first definite link between a physical disease and a mental disorder. Then, in 1944, penicillin came along to destroy the spirochetes. Today, paresis is fast disappearing from the scene in U.S. mental hospitals.

The metabolicists also point to the fact that the organic process called arteriosclerosis, involving a narrowing of the arteries, gradually chokes off the supply of blood to the brain so that the brain cells starve and eventually deteriorate.

It is this widespread affliction of old age, often climaxed by a stroke, which keeps our mental hospitals thronged with crotchety, confused and quarrelsome oldsters.

But the Freudians scoff at organic or chemical explanations for mental illness.

"I don't look for any chemical miracle to solve the problem," says Dr. Dexter M. Bullard, president of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation in Washington, D.C.

"Basically, mental illness is brought on by what people do to each other. You can make a chemical analysis of tears, but you cannot analyze the chemical content of grief that causes the tears."

A different viewpoint came from Dr. Winifred Overholser, 68, superintendent of federal-run St. Elizabeths Mental Hospital and former president of the American Psychiatric Assn.

"Chemicals at the moment offer the most hope for the next major breakthrough in treating mental illness," he told me.

Q. Is mental illness a disease? A. Some is, some isn't. I'm not sure it hasn't a chemical basis. It may be that a disordered metabolism makes the patient more susceptible to stress.

Q. Will there ever be a specific cure for insanity?

A. I think eventually there will be a series of answers but never a panacea. There may be some pretty important chemical answers, but a human being certainly has a psyche, and we can't overlook environmental factors either. I believe no one school has the way to salvation.

Most psychiatrists agree, however, that the trend today—influenced by the psychiatric drugs—is shifting away from the psychoanalyst's couch, with its long-drawn probing into emotional problems, and toward biochemical therapy.

For the big state mental institutions with their thousands of patients, chemistry seems to be the only long-range hope. Short-staffed and wretchedly overcrowded, most state hospitals make only the barest token use of psychoanalysis in treating their patients. Dr. Henry Brill, head of New York's Pilgrim State Hospital, told me the institution has never completed a single full-length psychoanalysis since it opened in 1932.

In any event, it is unlikely there will be any showdown for many years in the couch vs. pill controversy. There are not enough psychoanalysts in the entire United States today to attempt the mass treatment of patients at a single medium-sized state mental hospital by that long-drawn method.

There are, in fact, only 13,000 psychiatrists and about 30 full-fledged psychoanalysts in the country.

But Dr. Bullard, 61, Yale-educated psychoanalyst and a leader of the Freudian school, is convinced that the analysts are on the right path. Dr. Bullard is head of Chestnut Lodge, an exclusive private mental institution in Rockville, Md.

"We are sometimes called a court of last resort," he said in an interview. "We get the cases that couldn't be helped elsewhere—the chronic schizophrenics, manic depressives, even senile dementias if there is no serious arteriosclerotic damage to the brain."

"We rely almost entirely on psychoanalysis for treatment. If a patient gets disturbed, we have a psychoanalyst spend an hour or two with him. The only time we use psychiatric drugs, the tranquilizers, is to prevent excitement, fatal excitement."

Q. Can analysis be used with psychotics?

A. If psychoanalysis is good for one type of mental patient, it's good for all, psychotics as well as neurotics. We've got a patient who spent 3 years in a state mental hospital. He's still schizophrenic, but he has improved enough under psychoanalysis so that he goes on visits into town.

Q. Isn't schizophrenia a disease? A. I say it's not. It's a way of life. Mental illness is a seapara-tion an isolation from others. The mental patient speaks in parables and symbols, and when you can re-establish communication with him, there is a great deal of improvement.

Q. But can you, through psychoanalysis, talk away a disease? A. We've helped patients with paresis to get rid of their delusions, though they still had the disease.

In contrast to most state mental hospitals, which may have as few as 50 doctors to treat over 5,000 patients, Chestnut Lodge has a king-size staff of 25 full-fledged psychoanalysts, 55 nurses and 40 attendants to care for 100 patients. Its minimum fee is $19,000 a year.

I saw more disturbed behavior at Chestnut Lodge than I did at three huge public mental hospitals which make heavy use of the tranquilizers—New York's Pilgrim State Hospital (16,000 patients), Georgia's Milledgeville State Hospital (12,000) and the federal government's St. Elizabeths Hospital (7,800) in Washington.

Talking with Dr. Bullard in his quiet, book-lined study, I asked his views on the high incidence of mental illness in the United States.

Q. Is it the strain of modern living, the rat-race to keep ahead, or is it the result of global tensions?

A. We don't know, but we do know that mental illness seems to go in waves or cycles. When mental hospital superintendents meet and compare notes, they find that when one of them has a long waiting list, the others do, too, when one has empty beds, so do the others.

"It's not seasonal," Dr. Bullard continued. "It doesn't happen in the spring or summer or fall—and it has nothing to do with the world tensions, with A-bombs or spy planes. It's been that way for many, many years. Nobody knows why."

We do know today that mental patients suffer intensely, gripped by wild terror and abysmal depression. Two major types:

Manic-depressive—He can't slow down; talks too fast, too long, jumps around, with new ideas flying like sparks; no brakes, all driving, often sarcastic, witty, intelligent, his moods fluctuate, without apparent reason, between soaring elation and blackest despair.

Schizophrenic—He believes the whole world knows what he's thinking, thus the whole world must be talking about his faults. Eventually he hears voices whispering ugly things about him, even threatening to kill him. "They" are against him, bent on his humiliation and destruction. At times the schizophrenic lashes out in blind, homicidal fury, but more often retreats deeper and deeper into a dim, lifeless world of unreality.

Dr. Manfred Bleuler, noted Swiss psychiatrist, estimates that one in every 100 people on earth is afflicted with schizophrenia. More than half of all U.S. mental hospital beds are occupied by victims of this weird split-personality affliction.

Not too many years ago, doctors thought schizophrenia was caused by infected tonsils, and tonsilectomies promptly became the rage. Then electroshock was believed to be the solution, but though still used to break up acute depression, it is now tapering off.

Typifying the widespread controversy over different techniques, psychiatrists themselves disagree on the merits of electroshock treatment (EST) in the current age of tranquilizers.

"I'm very uneasy about the damage to the brain caused by EST," said Dr. Overholser of St. Elizabeths Hospital. "There's always a certain amount of risk, too, that the patient may die under shock. We don't do over a dozen ESTs a year any more."

But Dr. W. T. Smith, 39, clinical treatment director at Georgia's Milledgeville State Hospital, told me:

"EST works faster and better than drugs on depressives and suicides. On EST, the patients get dramatically better in a matter of minutes, while the drugs take two or three weeks to work."

The shock lasts only six-tenths of a second. The patient never feels it. The next thing he knows, he wakes up in bed and a few minutes later he's having breakfast. The black mood is gone."

Talking rapidly while giving EST to two women patients in swift succession, Dr. Smith said acutely depressed patients sometimes require as many as 200 to 300 shock treatments, once daily.

"Dangerous? Well, I've given over 12,000 ESTs and I've had only one death. When the patient is over 40, we examine their hearts to see if they can stand it—the convulsions are quite violent, as you can see—but we've given it to people over 80 years old."

Chains, ice baths, insulin coma, electroshock. "Wonder drugs." What lies ahead in the treatment of mental illness?

Today, psychiatrists are intrigued by novel experiments with the new psychomimetic chemicals which produce mock symptoms of insanity in normal people and, in some cases, unlock secret chambers of the mind.

In theory, if they can produce transient insanity by artificial means, they may find out what causes the real thing.

The psychomimetics include lysergic (LSD-25), a chemical warfare agent, and psilocybin, a synthetic compound similar to hallucination-causing mushrooms used by Mexican Indians in religious rites since pre-Columbus days.

The National Institute of Mental Health, reporting on research progress, says recent study "has suggested that some forms of mental illness may be related to biochemical processes in the brain and nervous system."

Dr. Seymour Kety, chief of NIMH's clinical science laboratory, cautions, however, against "premature optimism that a simple and fundamental biochemical defect in schizophrenia has been discovered or will be discovered in the near future."

In mental illness, there are no easy answers.

Vet Dies At 82

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An 82-year-old Spanish-American War veteran who lived the last 25 years of his life in solitude has died and left $349,737.33 to the U.S. Public Health Service for research.

Edward L. Shepard, who identified himself as "A sergeant in Company G of the Missouri Infantry in the War with Spain," earmarked the entire sum "for research wholly in cure and prevention of chronic spastic constipation." He died May 19.

Prospects Dim On Disarmament

WASHINGTON (AP) — A frustrated U.S. negotiator painted a bleak picture Saturday of world disarmament prospects and accused the Soviet Union of blocking every practical Western move during the long and fruitless Geneva sessions.

The State Department made public a report to Secretary Christian A. Herter from Frederick M. Eaton, U.S. negotiator, saying the Soviet delegates were "not interested in serious negotiations but rather were concerned only with propaganda."

Eaton said it is imperative that efforts for disarmament continue but held out scant hope for early success in the present atmosphere.

The United States and four Western Allies held 47 sessions in Geneva with the Soviet Union and four other Red nations between March 15 and June 27, when Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev wrecked the conference by pulling out the Communist negotiators.

During the long weeks of negotiation neither side ever moved away from its basic position. The Reds stood firm on Khrushchev's plan for a four-year program of total disarmament; the Western powers insisted on a step-by-step approach, beginning with limited and fully inspected measures to prevent war by surprise attack or by accident.

Eaton resigned last month as U.S. disarmament negotiator. At present the United States is trying to arrange, against Soviet opposition, for a meeting Aug. 15 of the full U.N. Disarmament Commission in New York to report the failure of the 10-nation conference at Geneva.

La. Governor 'Hit Of Show' In Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (UPI) — Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D-Okla.) made his debut as an author here Friday at a ranch-style barbecue featuring plenty of music and light hearted speechmaking as food.

The occasion marked the unveiling of Kerr's book, "Land, Wood and Water."

The hit of the show, however, was the vocalizing of Gov. Jimmy Davis of Louisiana.

Davis brought down the house, or rather, the tents, with spirited renditions of "You Are My Sunshine," "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" and other songs.

Kerr himself stole several big laughs, some of them on subjects that weren't so funny a few weeks ago when he was leading the ill-fated drive to secure the Democratic presidential nomination for Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson, who instead won the vice presidential nomination, joined in the humorous comments on his failure to win the top spot.

Davis brought a male quartet with him to supply background harmony for his singing.

"I know it's corny, but it's fun," said Davis. The guests by their applause, seemed in full agreement.

Plumber Dies Of Electrocution

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI) — A 47-year-old plumber died Thursday despite three hours of artificial respiration when an electrical pump shorted out and electrocuted him.

Police identified the victim as Raymond E. Loper, a plumber for central Louisiana state hospital for over two years.

Hospital authorities said two wires in the underside of the pump shorted against the pump frame as Loper was guiding it into place. He was standing in a flooded ditch when the accident occurred.

Derrick's Inside Structure

Area, State Play Vital Oil, Gas Roles

By RICHARD GREENE
Staff Writer

Louisiana, second in oil production in the nation, and Monroe, situated in one of the largest natural gas deposits in the world, have played a big part in making the petroleum industry what it is today.

It is unofficially estimated that beneath the earth's surface in Louisiana lies more oil per square mile than in any other state in the union. Recent figures released by the Oil and Gas Journal show the crude oil and condensate oil production in Louisiana at 1,050,600 barrels a day, second only to Texas with 2,461,900 barrels, third is California, and fourth is Oklahoma.

Contrary to the beliefs of many, the gas deposits in the area are not about to run out. They have declined, but three qualified estimates of gas reserves in the Monroe field in the past have been reached and passed. Reports say that the west side of the Monroe field in Union Parish still has a lot of production to come.

SURVEY

In the 14-parish Monroe district of the Louisiana Department of Conservation a recent survey shows 1,772 active oil wells. Of this total 90 are gas lift, 433 are flowing under their own pressure, and 1,249 are being pumped. It was reported by Duncan S. Cook, district manager. There are 2,345 active gas wells in the district making a total of 4,117 active oil and gas wells in the district.

When the first successful oil well was drilled in 1859 by Colonel Edwin L. Drake in North-western Pennsylvania, little speculation was made over the future of that development. It was considered just fuel for the old kerosene lamps.

But that event sounded the keynote to one of the biggest industrial giants in the nation. Since that time the petroleum industry has advanced, doubled, redoubled, and doubled several times again to find its place in the ranks with the billion dollar steel industry in the U. S. Days of the gusher are gone. Long ago when a well came in, precious oil would be wasted until the workmen could plug the well.

SCIENTIFIC

Now many scientific methods have come into use, such as geochemical prospecting. By this method geologists use chemicals in their search for petroleum. This system is one of the latest, but other scientific plans have also been successful.

Now that we have some basic facts and statistics, let's take the drilling of an oil well from the beginning.

LIKELY SITE

Before a location can be staked many steps must be taken to determine if a likely site will produce.

It is believed that petroleum was originally made up of marine animal and vegetable life left by the seas that covered different parts of the earth at intervals during the long ages of geological time. This probably accounts for the coastal regions of the world being rich in oil deposits.

The present Louisiana tide-lands case is brought to light by this, considering the chances of large sediments off the coast, drilling would seem quite profitable.

Geophysical surveys are made, using gravity sensitive instruments to test the gravitational pull of certain formations using the instrument's needle to detect the accuracy by deflection. Aerial photographs can be, and are, useful in locating possible deposits of oil or gas by the contour of the earth's surface.

Oil is usually found in dome-like spaces where the layers of rock have been pushed up in folds.

DATA

Sound waves generated by explosions that bounce off subsurface structures and register on an electric recorder called a seismograph yield important data as to what is down under.

Of course, other wells in the same general area are very helpful in the first stages of choosing the drillsite.

When the above steps look good then plans are made for drilling to begin.

A lease is obtained from the landowner and he is usually promised a percentage of the royalties when the well "comes in."

A civil engineer then stakes a location and a permit to drill is obtained from the local department of conservation, division of minerals.

Bulldozers are brought in and roads are built, the site is cleared and mud storage pits are dug which will play an important part in the drilling later.

DERRICK

A derrick is built, some come in sections, some are portable and others must be constructed from scratch on the ground up. With the tower up the actual drilling can start.

On an average well there is usually a trained driller, a derrick man who guides the drill pipe from a platform high above the ground, and several courageous roughnecks, on each shift.

Three eight-hour shifts are worked by the operators, as drilling, once begun, is a 24-hour procedure on most wells.

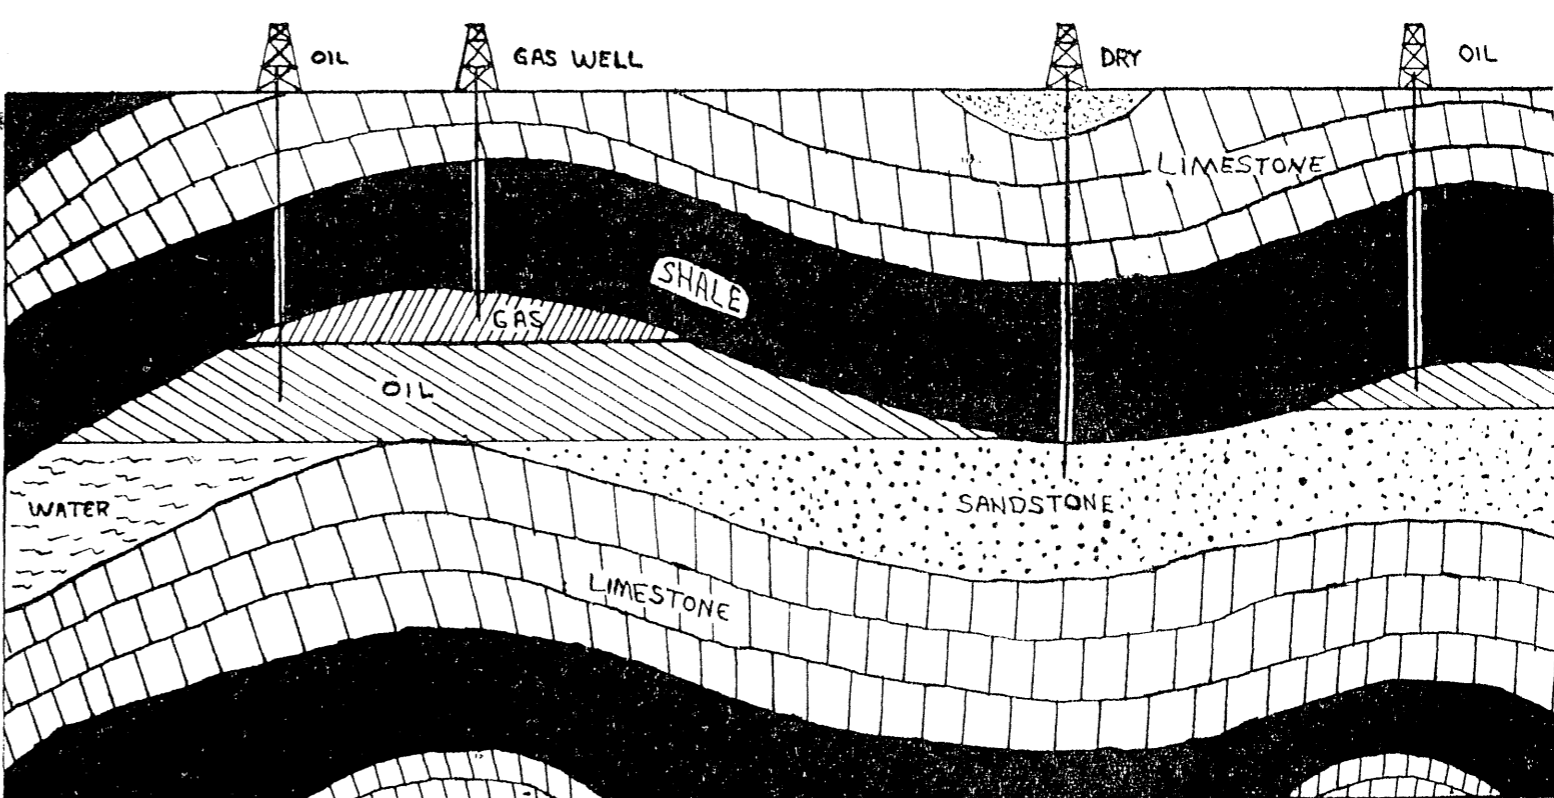

The danger involved in drilling a well demands a certain amount of courage and bravery of the workers. There are thousands of feet of pipe to handle, and a great amount of machinery to work around. In the construction of a derrick, it becomes a very apparent danger of the possibility of a section falling on a worker if a slip is made.

First they drill a shallow hole, or what is known as "spudding in." This hole is cased or lined to prevent cave-ins or pollution of the area's water supply.

ROTARY DRILL

A rotary type drill is attached to a hollow drill pipe which is connected with a large flat wheel or turntable resting on the floor of the derrick. The turntable is power-driven and the bits themselves are large and heavy.

As the drill pipe cuts through the rock formations it penetrates deeper and deeper into the ground. New sections of pipe, about 30 feet each, are then fitted to the top.

To keep the steel drill bit from overheating, a stream of mud is constantly forced down under pressure through the drill pipe and the hollow center of the bit. This mud is of a very special kind, made by mixing certain clays and chemicals with water.

After the mud passes through the hollow center of the bit, it returns outside the bit and pipe to the surface, carrying fine rock shavings with it. This serves to plaster the walls of the deepening hole, helping to prevent deeper cave-ins. When the gas, oil and water are finally reached, mud holds back the pressure so that the flow can be more readily controlled.

CORING

When the wanted depth or zone is reached it is time to core.

Then the bit has to be changed. This means pulling out of the hole thousands of feet of pipe and sticking it to the side.

Now a diamond coated circular bit with a core barrel attached is sunk. The bit cuts around the layers of rock or core, which are brought to the surface in the barrel and examined.

With the casing set a special kind of tubing, from two to two and a half inches in diameter, is lowered through the casing until it runs the entire length of the well. The space between the tubing and casing is sealed, so that the oil has to go through the tubing to get to the surface. Valves and meters attached to the top of the tubing control and measure the flow of the oil, when it is reached.

Ordinarily the natural pressure is enough to make the newly drilled well flow, but if the oil is there and will not come out there is still another way to make the well produce.

The stubborn oil can be pumped to the surface. Pumping is also used when the pressure at the bottom of a well becomes exhausted.

This is just one way to drill a well, probably the most used. But there are many other methods that are very successful for certain conditions. Also processes are combined to insure the best production.

But all wells are not successful. Quite the contrary. Many holes are drilled and found to be dry and non-productive. When this happens the site is usually abandoned and not thought of again other than as a loss in the pocket book.

Although dry wells are fairly common, there have been times when a site had been abandoned and then even several years later the same spot will be re-drilled and productive at a different depth.

Drilling can take anywhere from 10 to 100 days or more and the production can be from the least number of barrels for it to be profitable to as many that can be obtained. Each barrel contains 42 gallons. When the cost of operation exceeds the profit, then it is time to abandon the location or drill to a new depth.

There have been many changes in the processes of drilling for that all important black liquid that mother nature has blessed parts of the earth with. And there will be more changes in the future. But one thing that has not changed is the countless millions of dollars it has brought to the men who sought to venture into and take a risk on finding the mineral. About the only change that is foreseen here is that the income will increase!

Prosperity, New Spirit Rise In Bomb-Scarred Hiroshima

Editor's Note — Once upon a time, Hiroshima was a pleasant town noted mostly for its oysters and rice wine. Then the atom bomb scarred the name Hiroshima into history. Neither the city nor the world can forget that sunburst flash of death 15 years ago, but a new city and new spirit have risen from the ashes.

By DAW INOSHITA

HIROSHIMA (AP) — Horns honked raucously as a tangled line of taxis and buses piled up along Hiroshima's main thoroughfare.

A happy, shouting crowd milled through the bars and cabarets of the Hatchobori section.

A tourist stared dumbfounded. "What's the celebration?" he said.

A man turned and grinned. "What celebration?" he said.

"Our baseball team just won another ball game."

A half mile away in the anti-septically clean interior of the Atom Bomb Memorial Hospital, Maso Morishige stirred wearily in his bed and groaned.

"I wonder how the wife and children are getting along," he whispered. "But what's the use. Even if I get out of this hospital, I won't be able to go back to driving cars again."

on his chest and winced as pain stabbed his body.

These are the two faces of Hiroshima today, 15 years after it was shattered by the most terrible weapon to be used by man against man.

It was on Aug. 6, 1945, that a lone B29 high over Hiroshima dropped a strange new bomb which exploded "with the blinding flash of a thousand suns."

The awesome "pikadon" — the flash and concussion which followed — transformed a military port of 340,000 people in one instant into a plain of death.

Official police records said the bomb left 91,233 dead and missing and more than 30,000 others injured. Some Japanese sources claim the death toll was nearer 200,000. Japanese doctors also claim victims are still dying of radioactivity.

Hiroshima in 1945 was the home of the 5th Imperial Army Division and chief supply center of the Kure naval base across the bay. The symbol of its military prestige was the statues of carps which adorned the donjon of its proud feudal castle.

Post-bomb Hiroshima became the center of a worldwide pacifist outcry against war and armaments which leftists were quick to exploit. The city's symbol became the skeletal dome of the bomb-shattered Industrial Promotion Hall, marking the center of the bomb blast.

Today, a new Hiroshima has risen on the site of the old. True, the A-bomb dome monument still stands against the sky. A small fence and plaque at the entrance of the spick-and-span Sumitomo Bank building mark where the searing blast etched on the front of the building the outlines of a man sitting on the steps at the time.

But green lawn and shrubbery have softened the severe outlines of the peace park across the river from the dome. Clean, paved roads have replaced muddy, rut-filled belts. Big office buildings line the main streets where survivors used to live in shanties. Smart dress shops dot the colorful shopping center. Shiny new taxis, many of them air-conditioned, cruise the streets.

But the biggest change is in the people. Post-bomb Hiroshima, showing off its scars to the world under the prodding of leftists, often reminded visitors of a crippled soldier displaying his wounds to beg alms. Today there is among the people a fierce pride in the city and faith in its future. "Just paving the streets alone has uplifted them," says Mayor Shinzo Hamai.

In its new prosperity, Hiroshima has reverted to the carp for its symbol — this time the Hiroshima Carps, a so-so baseball team in Japan's Central League.

It's a rare day when 20,000 fans don't turn out for a Carp game. Hiroshima's population today is 430,000, compared to its pre-bomb peak of 410,000 in 1942. Bomb survivors number an estimated 20,000. The city is completing reconstruction next March. A follow-up program of expansion and new construction is expected to double the city's population in less than 20 years.

WIDE VARIETY

Noted before the war chiefly for its tasty oysters and rice wine and paper parasols, the city now has a wide variety of industries. Chief among them are the machinery division of the Mitsubishi Shipbuilding Company and the Tokyo Industrial Company, maker of Japan's newest "people's car."

Under the hustle of this new city, the wounds of the "pikadon" continue to fester, causing excruciating pain spasms. After years of study, world scientists are still unable to agree just how lethal the latent after-effects of exposure to an atomic bomb can be. But survivors of the Hiroshima bomb are dying today at the rate of four to six a month at the Atom Bomb Hospital alone.

Dr. Fumio Shigeto, hospital director who himself escaped the

A-bomb because he was in the shelter of a concrete building, says most of the survivors died of radiation-induced blood disease and cancer. Recently there has been an increase in liver ailments. The same phenomenon has been reported in Nagasaki, the other A-bombed city.

FEAR

The survivors, he says "live in a dark world. They live in constant fear of sickness and death." Morishige, 48 years old, but he looks 58. He has been sick 8 of the 15 years since the war. At one time he drove a sedan for U.S. officers. "I didn't have much direct contact with them other than driving them," the white-haired man said. "Otherwise, my anger against them for the bomb might have exploded."

City officials say there are many women so disfigured by the bomb that they still hide in their homes afraid to go outside. Suzue Hiyama, who received plastic surgery in the United States, knows how they feel. "I used to hate working in Osaka," she says, "because I had to go to the public baths."

Unpledged Electors

(In a previous editorial "The Morning World" discussed national and international effect of a stalemate decision in the House of Representatives. Today the "unpledged electors" proposal is the subject. Article XII of the Federal Constitution, which covers congressional procedure when there is no Electoral College majority for a presidential ticket, is published in full in an adjoining column and should be read in connection with the editorial.)

The decision of Governor Davis to ask the Democratic State Central Committee to "consider" proposals for an unpledged Louisiana slate of presidential electors will open the door to badly needed discussion of this highly controversial issue, and that always is good. The Governor has expressed no opinion, but it is well to let all opinions be brought forth.

The unpledged electors plan is the outgrowth of natural emotionality stemming from the most tragic problem to face the South in 85 years. If only for that reason it has produced an avalanche of misinformation, misunderstanding and even obviously false contentions. At the same time there is deep sincerity on the part of both proponents and opponents. In most instances, all have the common purpose of never giving up the fight against compulsory desegregation.

There are many factors that should be weighed carefully before Louisiana steps into what is a blind alley so far as previous precedent or experience are concerned. For example:

Not A Southwide Plan

The unpledged electors movement is not Southwide and cannot be. Democratic Party leadership in a number of Southern states already has committed itself to support of the Party ticket. As of now, it is not likely that more than three state Democratic organizations would go along with it. It is not needed in Louisiana to give a "third choice," for Louisiana already has a legally organized third party which will be on the ballot.

With only a portion of the Southern states taking part, either the unpledged electors plan or a third party ticket could virtually guarantee election of Kennedy by the House if the decision were made there, and without any bargaining or concessions on his part — the unpledged electors plan being more likely to do this than a third party.

Two questions stand out in the "Unpledged Electors" plan:

1. Who names the "faceless" slate of electors, representing no candidate, no known program other than their belief in segregation? Can a legal Committee of a legal Party legally name electors not representing any candidate? Opponents of the plan already have guaranteed court action if such a step is taken.

2. If there is any bargaining with Nixon and Kennedy through an indicated lack of an electoral majority for either on November 8, what can we bargain for within the narrowly limited field of what a President could grant? No President could change present Court rulings or commit Congress to any alleviating step.

"Unpledged Electors" and "Third Party" are not the same, although each depends on creating an indicated lack of an electoral majority for either Mr. Nixon or Mr. Kennedy in the November 8 nationwide voting.

"Unpledged Electors" seeks basically to bargain in a manner to create an Electoral College majority for a selected candidate and avoid a House decision.

"Third Party" seeks to avoid an Electoral College majority and bring a House decision.

"Unpledged Electors" also can throw the election into the House — though perhaps not legally.

"Third Party" can put it there with no question of legality.

A "Faceless Slate"

"Unpledged Electors" means a "faceless slate," pledged to no candidate, chosen by no national Party. The public would not have in mind the image of any person in voting for them. Few people would know the Electors or where they stood on issues other than segregation.

In the event of no effective bargaining for the South, the "faceless slate" still would have blank check authority to decide who can best lead this nation in the war against Communism and for survival of freedom — and in all other problems of the day.

Electors named by each state on November 8 meet within their states on the first Monday after the second Wednesday of December, which this year is December 19. Article XII of the Constitution makes it mandatory that they "shall" mark their electoral ballots and transmit them to "the seat of the government" addressed to the "President of the Senate" where they are opened on January 6 in the presence of both the Senate and the House. Failure to transmit the electoral vote brings a penalty of $1,000 under federal law.

Conceivably unpledged electors could fail to transmit their electoral vote, or refuse to vote, opening themselves to whatever legal action might be possible, or they could vote for "John Doe" — thus putting the election in the House.

But the principle is that the Electors would bargain with the candidates between November 8 and December 19 and, on December 19, cast their ballots for either Nixon or Kennedy. There would be no Electoral College stalemate, no House decision. Regardless of what they did, the Electors would be out of the picture after December 19. They would have no voice in a House election.

"Third Party" means three parties on the November 8 ballot with stated candidates for President and Vice President — in Louisiana the States' Rights Party. Such electors presumably would be pledged to candidates on their ticket, although there is talk of unpledged electors here, too.

With third party candidates, an indicated electoral stalemate in the November 8 voting would become an actual Electoral College stalemate on December 19, with the final decision automatically thrown into the House when the Senate counts the electoral ballots on January 6 in the presence of the House.

Stalemate Unlikely

The Constitution says the House then must vote on a President immediately — on the top three candidates. That would apply also under the third party plan. If the unpledged electors plan somehow got the decision into the House, there would be only two candidates — and a House stalemate would be virtually impossible.

Each state would have one vote in the House, this vote being determined by each state delegation, which would not have to follow the decisions of the Electors, now out of the picture. Even with a third party candidate, most state delegations probably would vote on a straight Republican or Democratic lines. Virtually all Southern Democratic delegations almost certainly would vote Democratic on the presidential test.

There now are 34 state delegations in the House with Democratic majorities and eight with Republican majorities. Eight are evenly split. A majority is 26.

Mr. Nixon stated publicly a few days ago that there was only a "bare chance" of the Republican Party gaining a majority of the members of the House. But a majority of members — highly unlikely — would not guarantee a majority of states for the GOP.

New Age Of Aristocracy

Mercifully Little Said At Conventions
About The Century Of The Common Man

WASHINGTON, D. C. — We heard mercifully little at the two national conventions about the "century of the common man" — and this may be because the USA is approaching its Age of Aristocracy.

Of the four candidates of the two major parties, only Richard Nixon could be called a self-made man. The other three are sons of the American Peasantry. Blood runs no bluer anywhere than the corpuses which animate Nixon's running-mate, Henry Cabot Lodge. Nobody could miss spotting him as a fine gentleman. He carries himself, wears his clothes, speaks his own and foreign tongues with the modest but unmistakable tone of nobility.

John Kennedy, a true prince of privilege, is only three generations away from shirt-sleeves, but his upbringing has given him the air of command. His association with academic intellectuals has bestowed upon him an aura of elevated ideas. Lyndon Johnson is a third generation squire, the product of educators and churchmen on his mother's side, and of outdoor rangers who have always been community leaders on the paternal side.

As another mark of aristocracy, all four of these candidates have done overseas wartime military service. One of them, Kennedy, was a combat commander, as well as being an established man of letters in the British tradition of Churchill, Eden, Macmillan and on back to Raleigh and Lovelace. Lodge acted the nobleman's way when he resigned a hard-won Senate seat to enter World War II. Characteristically, his acceptance speech at Chicago was spare and all but bare of the upright pronoun. Johnson because he was a Congressman, and Nixon because he was a Quaker, could have ducked military service. Both were under fire for their country.

It is not a small thing when a nation does what is indicated here — develops an aristocracy and turns to it for leadership. No other country in the New World has done so. It was considered unusual when France brushed off its shoal of socialists and communists to turn to the autocratic De Gaulle. It will be remarkable if Britain can find another Old School Tie to follow Macmillan. Yet here in our relatively young democracy, where money-making is the main pursuit and hereditary titles are banned by the Constitution, we seem to be attaining an upper crust to do us proud.

Responsibility is the hallmark of aristocracy. Noblesse oblige is its guiding policy. There doesn't seem to be any better confrontation of Communism than by these principles. Although both party platforms were written by the many, for the many, and are democratic to the extreme, this is not true of the candidates, unless in the case of Nixon. The Vice Presidential figures were both put on their tickets to provide a conservative balance — Johnson because he had over 400 delegate-votes from below the Potomac and beyond the Mississippi; Lodge because he has become the epitome of high echelon Red-baiting.

Surprisingly enough, Kennedy's acceptance speech at Los Angeles was far to the right of his platform. His theme was the opposite of demagoguery. Instead of "promises," he offered only "challenges." A little more lift and eloquence, and the Kennedy speech would have sounded like Churchill's unforgettable "blood, sweat and tears" oration. Kennedy's call for the New Frontier was in the old pioneer spirit. It was as if a British leader had called up the spirit of the Crusades.

No President could grant it. A "better deal" rests with Congress — or with the Courts. No President can commit either.

Southern Representation on the Supreme Court: That would change no present desegregation decision — and effect none in the foreseeable future. Also it would be impossible to gain Senate confirmation of any outstanding and outspoken Southern segregationist if one was appointed to the Supreme Court. He would have to be a "Southern moderate" or a "Southern liberal," which would help nothing.

Present Desegregation: No. President can change any existing Court ruling or Court personnel. Any "easing" by Congress faces a 5 to 1 "civil rights" Senate, and a similar hurdle in the House.

Federal Troops: There is no comparison between "Little Rock" and withdrawal of troops by Hayes in the Reconstruction days. That was a post-war occupation against an entirely different environment. Federal Court rulings always are subject to armed force enforcement by the Courts through Deputy U.S. Marshals.

Whatever the South does, it should know where it is going and what lies ahead — and especially what cannot lie ahead. "Unpledged Electors" offers no more than a mirage — a very unattractive one. Instead of producing a "Southern balance of power," it most likely would neutralize the electoral votes of states taking part.

Hotel Nostalgia

Fine Old Tradition Of Two-Dollar
Hotel Room Faded With Depression

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a shame the way America lets go so quickly of its past, and one of the traditions it has lost is the fine old tradition of the $2 hotel room.

Whatever happened to it anyway?

In these prosperous times, most middle-aged people shudder at the mere mention of the word "depression." It brings up mental pictures of breadlines and street strong men standing on street corners, trying to sell apples.

Actually, in the trying times between 1929 and the outbreak of the second World War, I don't recall any man trying to peddle me an apple.

Although the pay was small and the hours long during the depression years — if you were lucky enough to have a job, and most people were — they were years that had some consolations.

One of them was the $2 hotel room.

As many people today under the age of 35 have never heard of such a thing, perhaps I had better describe it.

The $2 hotel room was featured, usually, by a somewhat seedy and a bit run-down hostelry that had seen better days. It was strategically located across the street from a tavern that sold a tall foaming glass of beer for a nickel.

The hotel lobby was large and old-fashioned and furnished with plush red remnants of its faded grandeur. The floor was of marble. In the evening, traveling salesmen, like inland mariners, liked to sit in the lobby chairs and swap lies of their success on the road when they were younger.

When you checked in, an elderly bellhop delivered your bags to a creaking elevator and stored it himself up to your floor. If you gave him a two-bit tip he would flash a look of real gratitude, and if you gave him a four-bit tip he would sit down, break into tears, and tell you the story of his life. The room was $10 if you stayed a week, $25 to $30 if you stayed by the month.

The room itself was big and comfortable. It had a 19th century air of durability. It also had a lived-in look, as many of its hundreds of tenants had left some mark of their passing — a cigar burn on the writing table, carpet stains, a telephone number scribbled on the wall by the telephone.

The double bed was big and soft and over it hung a picture of Whistler's mother to remind the weary traveler that somewhere, sometime, someone had loved and waited for him — and perhaps still did.

The room held a big old chipped bureau; two floor lamps, one of which worked; a bedside table, and a huge shabby old chair by the window where you could sit and read the Gideon Bible or look across the court to see if anything interesting was going on in the $2 rooms over there.

Sometimes you had to take a bath down the hall, but if the room did have a bath attached it was huge and often held a tub large enough to cradle the Cardiff Giant.

What the $2 hotel room lacked in style, it made up for in other ways. It was light, airy, generous in size, mellow with the security of the past, and gave millions of Americans a bargain when they needed one most.

Whatever happened to the $2 hotel room?

Some hotels have cut it into three $12 rooms with single hide-away beds that only a mechanical engineer can open. And over the bed hangs a water color of the Arc de Triomphe in pelling rain.

And if you palm the bellhop with less than a buck, he looks at you as if you were either Silas Marner or Rip Van Winkle. As soon as you unpack your clothes you go out to a movie.

Anything to get away from this impersonal, cold substitute the management likes to call "your home away from home."

Party Fissures

As In Past Election Years, Breaks
Have Been Noted In Empire State

Fissures are to be expected in the ranks of both major parties in any Presidential election year. The first one of serious proportions arose in the ranks of the Democrats. Perhaps that is due to the fact that the Democrats nominated their ticket two weeks earlier than the Republicans and cleavages have had a chance to show.

But the annoying fact for the Democrats is that the rift is in the biggest of all States — New York — which has 45 electoral votes, or a sixth of the 269 electoral college majority.

The Empire State fight is an extension of the 1953 split which resulted in the upset victory of Republican gubernatorial candidate Nelson A. Rockefeller at a time when the country was land-sliding to the Democrats.

So many New York personalities are at one another's throats that it is a little difficult to give the exact line up. Firmly on one side are former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Thomas K. Finletter, the last named who held various posts in Washington during the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations.

In the opposing camp is Carmine G. DeSapio, leader of Tammany Hall and Democratic National Committeeman, who is in what appears to be an extremely uneasy alliance with Democratic State Chairman Michael H. Pendergast. Mayor Robert Wagner of New York seems to wobble uncertainly between the two groups.

Democratic Presidential candidate John F. Kennedy was confronted with the New York split immediately upon his return from victory at Los Angeles. He sought to care for the situation by the appointment of a "Citizens for Kennedy" Committee. That caused some unexpected raising of eyebrows throughout the country as it omitted the name of Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, Kennedy's Vice Presidential ticket mate.

As far as the New York situation was concerned the "Citizens for Kennedy Committee" raised more problems than it settled. State Chairman Pendergast let it be known that he intended to run the New York campaign. Robert F. Kennedy, the candidate's brother, hurried to New York to care for the emergency.

The Democratic trouble was going on concurrently with what on the surface was a blissful concord between Republican Presidential Candidate Richard M. Nixon and Governor Rockefeller. If Rockefeller's present professed enthusiasm for Nixon is the genuine article then the Democratic national ticket could be in real trouble in the most populous of the States.

Brother Bob Kennedy after many anxious hours has obtained the semblance of an understanding in New York. Pendergast has agreed to the auxiliary campaign to be run by the "Kennedy for President" group. No objection was made to the title, as Vice Presidential Candidate Johnson is no darling of the New York liberals.

But there really has been no "happy family" settlement despite public statements. Such built-in problems of party factionalism just are not settled that readily and some of the most astute New York Democrats say the cracks will be more vividly revealed later.

New York, as the 1960 Presidential race gets under way, is rated a close State. Actually it has been a close State in only one Presidential race in this century. That was in 1928 when its popular Governor, Alfred E. Smith, as the Democratic Presidential nominee, came within 103,481 votes of Herbert Hoover, the Republican.

Smith ran a smashing race in New York City but the Hoover majority which came down from Republican Upstate New York swamped him. The question this year again seems to be whether Kennedy, who is believed to have enormous New York city popularity, can overcome the Nixon tide which will come down from Upstate New York.

Generally the landslides in New York State have gone to Republicans. Harding, 1,150,000 in 1920; Coolidge, 900,000 in 1924; Eisenhower's record breaking 1,500,000 majority over Adlai Stevenson in 1956. But Franklin D. Roosevelt took it by 1,112,000 over Alfred Landon in 1936.

The 3,018,298 New York votes cast for Roosevelt in 1936 was the greatest ever cast for a Democratic Presidential candidate in that State. By 1940 it had dropped to 2,834,500 against the 3,251,000 cast by Republicans for Wilkie, but more than 800,000 votes polled by the two splinter parties — American Labor and Liberal pulled Roosevelt through.

Roosevelt suffered a further loss to 2,478,598 in 1944, when Thomas E. Dewey polled 2,841,963. But again the two splinter parties pulled the state out for him.

This year only the splinter Liberal party remains. It has suffered a great diminution of strength.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian
Books for every type of reader may be found among the recent additions to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. In the field of fiction the range is wide. A penetrating and observant novel is "Lament for a City" by Henry Beethle Hough. It is the story of a city and a newspaper and everyone who has been connected with a newspaper should thoroughly enjoy reading it. "Has Anybody Seen My Father" is a modern story of the world of Madison Avenue and suburbia. There is not much to the story, but it is entertaining and believable. A new and better than average western is "The Ferguson Affair" by W. M. McDonald. A serious novel which has received excellent criticisms is "Ceremony in Lone Tree" by Morris Wright. It has its setting in Nebraska and presents a clear and pitiless picture of the problems and frustrations of the men and women who people it's pages. "Lord Fancy" by Leslie Turner White has its setting in Regency England. It is a story of a country lad come to town in search of adventure. It is a good, fast paced story, even though the characters are not memorable. A book by Robert Wilder always has a popular appeal. He writes well, his stories are plausible and he usually has modern setting. His latest one is "The Sun is My Shadow," the story of an American woman, pursued by ambition and driven by all sorts of compulsions. This is a book which is certain to be read and discussed. A new novel by Frank Swinerton is "A Tigris in the Village." It will appeal to all who enjoy stories with an English setting.

In the field of non-fiction there is an excellent variety. "Put It On The Front Page, Please" by John Henry Cutler, will appeal to all who are interested in the world of the newspaper. "The Seven Ages of Woman" by Dr. Elizabeth Parker contains a great deal of worthwhile information for women. "Being Married" by Evelyn M. Duvall is a practical book which should help many troubled marriages. "The Ancient Library of Qumran and Modern Biblical Studies" by Frank Moore Cross adds new knowledge to the interesting field of the Dead Sea Scrolls. The first volume in the Putnam history of religion is "The Ancient Gods" by E. O. James. A lovely book of spiritual help is "Spiritual Therapy" written by Richard K. Young. One of the groups who had a widespread influence on the history of our country was the Quakers. Frederick Tolles has written an interesting account of their work in a book which he calls "Quakers and the Atlantic Culture." Barbara Jackson Ward is the author of a book of political economy called "Five Ideas That Changed the World." "The Ile de France" by Donald Stanford is the story of one of the most beautiful ships which ever plied the seas.

Written especially for young people is "Careers and Opportunities in Chemistry" by Phillip Pollack. A book which should help many bewildered people is "You Can Prevent Illness" by Edward R. Pinckney. "To Know the Difference" by Albert D. Ullman is a story of alcoholism and should shed new light on this subject. A new world in the field of electrical communications is "Masters." The library has a brand new book on this subject written by Jerome K. Singer.

The interest of the people in this community in their lawns and gardens is reflected in the fact that the library never has enough books in the field of gardening and flower arrangement. This week four new titles were added to the collection. They are "Taylor's Encyclopedia of Gardening, Horticulture and Landscaping Design" by Norman Taylor; "Diseases and Pests of Ornamental Plants" by Pascal Pirone; "Flowers, Free Form Interpretive Design" by Morris Benz and "Home Book of Flower Arrangements: Using Oriental, European and Colonial Containers" by Estelle G. Easterby.

Cookbooks are always popular and a new one is called "The Stove-Top Cookbook" and was written by Mala Reynaud. An interesting approach to the advertising business is presented in a book by Perrin Stryker called "The Men From the Boys." "House Carpentry Simplified" by Nelson L. Burbank will be most helpful to the do it yourself cult. "Budget Landscaping" by Carlton Lees should appeal to all who are landscaping on a small budget. Those who saw the play "The Gazebo" will want to read "Architectural Follies in America" which discusses all sorts of lawn structures of the last century. Books about coins are always popular and the newest one is "A Treasury of the World's Coins" by Fred Reinhold. For bridge players there is a new book "The Fishbein Convention" written by Harry J. Fishbein.

When next you are called upon to preside at a banquet, remember that the library has books to help you. The latest one of this type is "Toaster's Treasury" by Edward L. Friedman. Books of history and travel appeal to many readers. "The Face of the Ancient Orient" by Sabatino Moscati is a very scholarly work. "Doorways to the World" by Elissa Daggs is an interesting account of travel and exploration. "London" by Anthony Armstrong-Jones is largely a book of photographs, but it is a beautiful book and certain to be in demand. "Hunga-land" by Allen E. Banki has been in great demand even before the library could secure a copy. Everyone wants to read about this fabulous country where the inhabitants live to an extreme old age. "Brazil: It's People and Institutions" by Thomas Lynn Smith is an excellent presentation of this great neighbor to the South. "What Cares the Sea?" by Kenneth Cooke is another story of high adventure and daring on the seas during World War II. "Crimean Blunder" by Peter Gibbs is a thorough account of the Crimean War. "Nasser's New Egypt" by Keith Wheelock is a critical analysis of his regime in Egypt.

The diaries show a man hostile to some of the "progress" we boast of; he hates Rome's sprawling new suburbs, and new buildings around the approaches to Florence's Ponte Vecchio; and he's savagely critical of traffic whose "needs are of Italy's most famous towns" — as they are on the American scene, too.

Sunset Touch About People Over The Top

A SUNSET TOUCH. By Moira Pearce. Scribners. $3.95.

Medusa Nash is being buried as this novel opens in the New England town of Leicester. The not too bereaved husband Harold is there, almost completely paralyzed, and also present are his friends, or rather, acquaintances—this sharp-tongued writer doesn't go for friendship.

John and Lily Dewhurst, central figures in the story; Joe Larkin; Betty Levering; Cora and William; Arthur Herendeen, who sneers at the gaudy coffin as "like something from Schrafft's"; Harold's sister the school mistress whose favorite word, Mrs. Pearce's sardonic description, is "relate": Her pupils won't "relate" to her disabled brother, or the admirable Mr. Dewhurst surely must "relate" to a pretty landscape.

WORD FOR IT
If that's the word for it, a very great many readers will "relate" ecstatically to this first novel. It's a tale of people just over the top and setting foot with misgivings on that downward slope that leads to the cemetery beside Medusa. There are some gruesome explicit warnings: Shattering glimpses of the very aged being kept alive — mercilessly, as these people hint — and in dreadful pain by the guile of doctors armed with new drugs and operating equipment.

Sir Walter. The Great 'Cavalier'

THAT GREAT LUCIFER: A Portrait of Sir Walter Raleigh. By Margaret Irwin. Harcourt, Brace. $4.50.

The number of enemies Raleigh — you're more familiar with Raleigh? — roused up against himself in his years of service to Queen Elizabeth and King James is almost beyond counting. It includes those who began friendly and turned hostile, like Francis Bacon and Robert Cecil; it includes those who hated him throughout, like his fiery rival Essex and of course, to begin at the top, the Scots James and Spain's Philip II. There was that Judas Sir Lewis Stukeley, Sir Edward Coke, Buckingham, Gondomar, Pomham, Lord Cobham the recanter, Henry Howard who called cynical Raleigh the "Great Lucifer."

He had steadfast friends, too, we are reminded in the growing biographical tribute to the "last of the Elizabethans," they were not only Guyana and Orinoco chiefs, but the poet Spenser; that ill-starred Henry, the young Prince of Wales who may have died of poison; and naturally his half brother, his son Wat who was his spitting image, and his wife Bess Throckmorton whom he loved, as she loved him, with a fierce conjugal devotion rare in the rude Elizabethan era.

Haiti Peasants Not Poster Type. Live In Poverty

HAITI: Black Peasants and Voodoo. By Alfred Metraux. Universe Books. $8.50.

The three million peasants who exist in the valleys and on the mountain slopes of Haiti are not types for tourist posters. They're picturesque, but their poverty and misery are too appalling.

Alfred Metraux wasn't a tourist. He was sent to the island republic to study rural life, and while doing so he was won over by the charm and friendliness of these destitute people. His book reflects his genuine affection, but his scholarly yet highly readable prose is never marred by descending paternalism nor maudlin apologetics.

PEASANTS
The Haitian peasants Metraux writes about stand on their own feet as they try to wrest a living from rocky slopes and impoverished soil. Their day to day struggle for survival, their lighter moments, their common law practices, their superstitions and religion come alive for the most casual reader.

The illustrations, mostly photographs by Pierre Verger, are remarkable for capturing the spirit of the people with superb technical artistry.

Numerous (and probably rare) snapshots of pagan rituals point up the author's concern with voodoo. His intelligent understanding of the peasants' religion, which mixes Catholic practices with longstanding pagan rites, doesn't use the customary sensational treatment to make it dramatic. It doesn't need it. It's pretty heady in its own right.

VIEW
According to the author, voodoo worshippers see no problem in their dual allegiance. They identify their gods called loa, with Catholic saints (cheap prints are easy to get and are decorative in temples.)

Divorces Easy As You'd Tell A Friend So Long

By TOM DYCARD
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—No matter where you live, you can get an Alabama divorce in about the time it takes to say, "So long, dear, let's always be friends."

That is, if your spouse is willing and you have the price—usually from $300 up.

Maybe you won't even have to leave your home in New York, Chicago, or wherever. If you have the right lawyer, and he sees the right judge, you can get your decree by mail.

But that's the risky way. It leaves you open to having the divorce set aside if your spouse should have a change of heart later.

Probably you'll have to spend a few hours on Alabama soil—nothing much more than a long stopover between planes—to be safe.

At worst, you'll have to spend a few days in the state. This is likely only if your name is news and your divorce—when the word leaks out—is apt to make newspaper headlines. You remain a few days, buy a vacant lot or rent a house or apply for a job to build the fiction you are a resident of Alabama.

You need provide only two ingredients—the willingness of the spouse and the price of the right lawyer.

A third ingredient, a gaping loophole in Alabama's divorce law, was provided by the Legislature in 1945.

Prior to 1945 divorces for Alabama people were just as much the quickie variety as they are today, but one year of residence was required. The 1945 Legislature changed the law to read simply residence is required.

The courts traditionally accept intent to establish residence as equal to the fact.

It was a door to a booming business.

One attorney reportedly handles 40 cases a week at fees ranging about $300 and made $50,000 in a recent four-month period.

Most of the clients are little-known people who turn to Alabama for a divorce because the restrictions are too tight in their home state.

But increasingly in recent years the laxness of Alabama divorce procedure had attracted internationally known persons—baseball's Hank Greenberg, television's John Daly, and Tina O'neiss, who recently divorced Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Some of them are attracted by the good chance they'll get out with little or no publicity from small towns in sparsely settled counties.

Alabama is tougher than many states when it comes to allowable grounds for divorce. Mental cruelty and incompatibility—two of the favorite grounds in some states—won't stand up in Alabama.

The most popular grounds for divorce in Alabama are physical cruelty and threat of bodily harm.

But the grounds for divorce are a small hurdle when both parties are agreeable.

Consider the hypothetical case of Mrs. X of New York City. She wants to divorce Mr. X as quickly, painlessly and quietly as possible. Mr. X has no objections. They are able to agree on a property settlement.

Mrs. X contacts the New York partner of a law firm set up to handle just such cases. The New York lawyer's partner is in Alabama, possibly in a rural county.

Mrs. X boards a plane for Alabama. She either is bringing her bill of complaint prepared by the New York partner, or she will pick it up from the Alabama partner. Perhaps she is bringing along her husband's answer-in-waiver in which he denies the allegations in her bill—as required by law—and waives the right to further action.

The answer-in-waiver is necessary to show the court that the spouse has consented to the divorce.

At the airport, Mrs. X is met by her attorney. Probably they go to his office.

Lawyer: "You intend to remain in Alabama and become a permanent resident, don't you?"

Mrs. X: "Yes."

With that little bit of dialogue the lawyer sidesteps any charge that he knowingly put through a fraudulent divorce action.

Now the lawyer has three errands to run.

He must visit the clerk's office, where he files Mrs. X's bill of complaint and her husband's answer-in-waiver. It takes about 10 minutes.

He goes from there to the judge. "Judge," he says, "these folks are clients of mine and they want a divorce."

The judge may be putting on his hat to go to lunch, but he stops for the 30 seconds or so needed to sign the order of divorce.

Then the lawyer returns to the clerk, who makes out the decree. It takes another 10 minutes.

Mrs. X and Mr. X now are divorced.

With some lawyers, quick divorces for people from out-of-state are a full time business, with others only a profitable sideline. Many lawyers won't touch the business.

Judges who handle the divorces simply assume that jurisdictional requirements have been met.

Circuit Judge William G. Lindsey of Chatham in Washington County near Mobile, who granted the Tina O'neiss divorce in June, said she "met the requirements," in his opinion, under Alabama law.

He said she showed the court evidence that she was a resident of Mobile, that she had a bank account in Mobile, and that she had bought a residential lot on nearby Dauphin Island, and then jumped to 14,776 in 1946 after the law was changed.

Until recently, opposition to the loophole in the law has been confined to sporadic criticism from some pupils, newspapers and a mild outbreak of public opinion when a well-known personality's divorce calls attention to the state.

The bar association last month passed a resolution calling for reinstatement of the 12-month residency.

A grand jury in Birmingham, recently recommended a 12-month residency requirement. Church groups are going on record as demanding an end to the loose divorce law.

A bill was introduced in the Legislature last year that would have returned the 12-month residency requirement. It never got out of committee.

The privately oft-spoken feeling of the Legislature is this: "These people want divorces and they're going to get them somewhere, so why not here?"

PARIS IN THE SPRING

Colorful French Capital Is Like Love--A Disease

Editors Note—Paris is beautiful, exciting, intellectual, old and ever new. It's full of contrasts, crowded with ideas, jammed with activity. It's a place, says Associated Press writer George Arthur in this fourth story in a series on great cities of the world, where living means far more than simply breathing in and out.

By GEORGE CARUTHUR

PARIS (AP)—Like love, Paris is a disease that defies any treatment but more of the same.

It normally enters through the eyes and ultimately has all the senses in such a feverish state they never return to normal—whatever normal is in other less favored cities.

Paris has been called the city of light, the city of lovers, the city of poets, the city of artists and much more. It is all of these and more to boot.

It's a feeling, the electric sensation of three million people determined to take off in different directions and damn the torpedoes.

Historians note that the population began to get out of hand—in almost every conceivable way—some 500 years ago. Every true Parisian is hotly engaged in perpetuating this condition.

Life in Paris is an unending skirmish with your fellow man for woman, if luck is with you. If you can't stand the gaff, don't come. If you can't take it, leave.

But if you stick around, you'll know you're being loved, not just breathing in and out.

In Paris, you don't order a meal, hire a taxi, pay a bill, buy a hat, phone the police. You negotiate. You discuss it. You talk it over.

You don't drive in Paris. You hoist your battle flags and charge. DRIVE.

You don't go out to dinner in Paris. You eat. There are 5,000 restaurants in the city—give or take — and healthy men break down when they have to pick one and pass up the other 4,999, until tomorrow.

You don't ask a girl for a date in Paris. You make a rendezvous. Voilà...Roll that word around and think of the limitless possibilities it brings to mind.

So more than half the houses were built more than a century ago and lack the modern comforts. So the walls are gray and the weather isn't what it should be. So the prices are high. Who cares?

Youngsters—and oldsters—with ideas still flock to the town where an art show can cause a riot but a man with two heads could hardly draw a crowd.

London, Rome, New York, Berlin all think they are sophisticated. It may be, but why do their inhabitants flock to Paris every summer and gawk when they see a simple little sight? A sight like Napoleon's majestic Arc de Triomphe glittering in golden spotlights. Or the vast Place de la Concorde with its fountains dancing by gaslight. Or the gigantic bedlam of the "Les Halles" marketplace, the "belly of Paris."

Paris has the sweep of modern history in the meanest narrow street. No great event of modern times has escaped her influence. Lenin studied here. So did Ho Chi Minh, who washed dishes to pay his way. The Suez and Panama canals were conceived here. The atomic age was nurtured, if not born, in the brain of Eve Curie. The infant United States benefited from the advice of its then ambassador to Paris Benjamin Franklin, still revered by Parisians for his wit and, it is said, attraction for the ladies.

Napoleon dreamed of making the city the capital of Europe and almost did so at a cost in blood that finally shocked Paris, for a time, although his monuments now dominate the city.

Paris gave the modern meaning to the word revolution (not without some later regrets) and ended the era of monarchy when the head of Louis XVI dropped into a basket at the Place de la Concorde.

The Concorde acquired such a reputation for rioting that French governments are fearful of it, even today. Students from the world over have charged across its cobblestones—even the late John F. Kennedy admitted he had done so himself as a youth, though he couldn't remember for what cause.

This is the intoxicating background that makes Paris what she is—a 2,000-year-old courtesan who has never grown old because she awakens to new possibilities every day.

This isn't the Paris of the tourist. No two-week visitor ever caught more than a whiff of the city. Two weeks can be monstrous fun—or even a complete bust, as often happens. But it's not Paris. The clip joints on Rue Pigalle and the garish hangouts along the Champs Elysees are hardly different from clip joints on New Orleans' Bourbon Street, or in London's Soho or off the Tokyo Ginza.

But if that's what you want, Paris offers a dazzling display. It may be true that most of the leggy girls come from Scandinavia and the bony ones from Germany. But that too, is part of Paris.

She's a heady mixture of people from everywhere. The nice, and the not so nice. If you want to be shocked, she can shock you. Try the Rue Sebastopol. The last stop before oblivion for the ladies of the night, or the far reaches of Montmartre where twisted men and women flaunt their afflictions.

It's all Paris, even the drunken clods, the dums, stumbling for a night's rest beneath the bridges over the Seine.

Despite the sin, there are few cities in the world where philosophy and religion are so fiercely discussed. Ideas roam the streets as people do elsewhere. If Sartre is the rage today (and he is no more), another will take his place tomorrow.

The great, the near-great and the not so great are all rubbing shoulders every day, all over town. You don't really have swank districts. The plushiest apartments are buried behind the centuries-old walls of the Ile St. Louis in the middle of town. The meanest garrets can be found on the top floors of new buildings overlooking the Bois de Boulogne.

The mixture makes life difficult for the politician. A district that should vote left turns up with a rightist majority, and vice versa. That's the way Parisians like it. They don't even have a mayor. They have 20 district mayors who elect a "chairman."

An official guide book spells it out simply: "Parisians laugh at rules."

THE MISSING BREWER

Mystery Of Disappearance Of Coors Lingers On--On

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP)—The mystery cloaking the disappearance Feb. 9 of wealthy brewery executive Adolph Coors III lingers on and on.

Pieces in one of modern criminal history's most baffling puzzles won't fall into place. Authorities aren't certain—or won't say—but the most important missing piece may be a missing man, making the Coors' case a double mystery.

Coors, 44, vanished while he was driving 12 miles over a gravel road from his home near the mountains to the Coors brewery in this community on Denver's outskirts.

The puzzle's missing part might be Joseph Corbett Jr., 31, an escaped California killer, who is listed as one of the FBI's 10 most-wanted individuals.

Nobody is saying Corbett had anything to do with Coors' disappearance. Nobody is even implying such is the case. However, a spokesman for authorities close to the case says this about Corbett:

1. He disappeared from his Denver apartment less than 24 hours after Coors dropped from sight about 8 a.m. on Feb. 9. Corbett, who lived in Denver four years under the alias of Walter Osborne, says his landlady was going to nearby Boulder to enroll in the University of Colorado.

2. A week after Corbett's disappearance, police at Atlantic City, N.J., found a 1954 yellow Mercury sedan blazing on a city dump. The vehicle had the same engine number as one which Corbett had purchased in Denver in January.

3. A foreman at Coors' home told authorities he saw a yellow car which resembled Corbett's near the spot where Coors' abandoned station wagon was found on a bridge spanning Turkey Creek. The car was seen several days prior to Feb. 9.

When a truck driver found Coors' station wagon abandoned on the bridge, the motor was idling and the radio was playing. Authorities found blood smears on the back of the front seat and on the bridge railing. They also found a longvisored cap Coors wore much of the time and the millionaire's plastic-rimmed glasses beside the creek below the bridge.

Even the bloodstains haven't proven a piece to the puzzle. Sheriff Art Weremuth, answering mostly "no comment" to questions about the case, claims it has not been determined whether the bloodstains were the same type as Coors'.

The bloodstains, the vacant station wagon, the visored cap and the glasses are the clues.

For weeks, some authorities believed that when the winter snows were gone from the mountains they'd find what might prove to be the link they needed—Coors' body. The snow has now melted.

No Coors. No Corbett. No Coors' family remains in seclusion in their ranch-type home. His wife, Mary Grant Coors, and four children maintain hope their husband and father is still alive.

Soon after Coors' disappearance Mrs. Coors asked officers to withdraw from the area surrounding her home, thus removing any obstacles that might stand in the way of possible ransom negotiations.

Authorities complied. Some 15 or 20 letters, most of them demanding huge sums of ransom money, were received. They were believed the work of cranks and pranksters. None was followed up.

The FBI hasn't linked Corbett publicly at least—with the Coors investigation. Agents insist Corbett's name was placed on the 10 most-wanted list because he escaped from a prison farm at Chino, Calif., in 1955. Corbett was serving a term for second-degree murder.

Corbett is known to be a gun fanatic. Often he went into the mountains alone for target shooting. FBI agents have given him the "extremely dangerous" label.

It could be merely a coincidence that Corbett, a fugitive for five years, vanished the day after Coors' disappearance. It could also be coincidence that the FBI found out Corbett was living in Denver at approximately the same time Coors disappeared. It might be coincidence, too, that Corbett drove a yellow automobile, though about the car.

Dual Tribute To Bernard Berenson

BERENSON. By Sylvia Sprigge. Houghton Mifflin. $5. THE PASSIONATE SIGHTSEER. Bernard Berenson. By Raymond Mortimer, from Bernard Berenson's diaries 1947 to 1956. Simon & Schuster. $10.

Aged 94, Berenson died last October in his famous villa, "I Tatti," near Florence. He was born in 1865 in the Pale of Settlement, all-Jewish land visited by pogroms whenever the all-powerful czars willed it; and his family, losing its property there, came to America and Boston in 1875. The father was a peddler; a couple of times he spared his children embarrassment — and they appreciated it — by sneaking out the back door of a home they entered through the front door as guests. The boy read insatiably, and always remembered his indebtedness to the Boston Public Library. He turned Episcopalian — he would later become Catholic, his wife said, and he was married by priests as well as a city clerk in Florence. He entered Harvard in a class in which no Jew was registered. In 1888 he first set foot in Italy, and rarely returned to this country.

Some professors seem to have financed his trip. Mrs. Isabella Stewart Gardner of Boston's famed Fenway Court took an interest in him; and within a couple of years he bought for her, on commission, a good two dozen indisputable art masterpieces.

His mentors were Walter Pater, for pure sensuousness, and Giovanni Morelli and Giovanni Battista Cavalcaselle as masters of what we call expertise. Three quarters of a century ago Europe was full of paintings which their owners claimed were by top artists though most were by nonentities. It was before X-ray, infra-red and chemical analysis; to identify a master hand an authority had to know it intimately. By the most exacting and detailed research, by "factice values" and "space composition," by painstaking comparisons, Berenson became the man who served not only Mrs. Gardner's acquisitive career but also, for three decades, the dealer Lord Duveen until, as Miss Sprigge reminds us, nobody would think of buying a picture within Berenson's competence without his authentication. In his early years he got bounced from an English manor for challenging an owner's claim for a painting. In 1893 he took to pieces the catalog of a London show of "Venetian art," saying that out of 33 so-called Titians, only one was authentic, allowing none of the four "carpaccios," ruling out a "Mantegna" and a "Moroni," and dismissing a portrait identified as of a lady professor from Bologna, by Giorgione, as neither lady, professor, nor Bolognese, and not by Giorgione. The most spectacular decisions handed down from his eminence were for Duveen on "La Belle Ferronniere," owned in Kansas City, which he said was not by Leonardo, and against Duveen on our National Gallery's "Nativity," now labeled prudently Giorgione with maybe Titian touches.

His peddler father's children did very well. Besides Bernard, whose villa, land, pictures and library were left to Harvard, one daughter taught at Smith, one married philosophy professor Ralph Barton Perry. Bernard himself married Mary Smith; her sister Alys was Bertrand Russell's first wife; Mary left two children largely to her mother's care and deserted their father and her husband to spend some 10 years in and near Florence where Berenson was before their marriage, and the two had extra-marital affairs later. Both stayed bravely in Italy during the two wars, and in the second suffered danger and hardships.

The diaries show a man hostile to some of the "progress" we boast of; he hates Rome's sprawling new suburbs, and new buildings around the approaches to Florence's Ponte Vecchio; and he's savagely critical of traffic whose "needs are of Italy's most famous towns" — as they are on the American scene, too.

Political Parties

Hold Little Interest

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Employees of a major oil company were advised this week only 2 per cent of the citizens of the United States are active in political parties.

"I was shocked to learn so few citizens are active in politics," commented K. S. Adams board chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co.

In his monthly "As I See It" letter to employees, Adams said the preservation of democracy and the American economic system are endangered by such small scale dedicated interest.

Old Adage In Real Estate Still Applies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Caveat emptor—"let the buyer beware"—is an old real estate adage.

It is not just a piece of outmoded cynicism. It is sound advice that can save the house hunter, money, headaches, and even the heartache that an unwise purchase can bring.

It is the cardinal rule in a new home buyer's guide published by two Air Force officers, Col. R. R. Smith and Maj. E. A. Michalski, as a result of their own experiences in house hunting and subsequent investigation which led them to the conclusion that the average home buyer is woefully uninformed in the face of what is usually the largest single purchase of a lifetime.

IGNORANT
The average individual, they found, is almost totally ignorant of real estate laws, financing criteria and procedures; does not know how to deal effectively with a real estate agent, broker or salesman; buys a home without adequate investigation of either house, property or the local housing situation; and buys without proper representation to protect his interest.

The home buyer's guide advises the home seeker all the way from the initial question, "Buy or rent?" right through to "morning after panic," that inevitable psychological reaction of all home purchasers who, once they have signed the sales contract, immediately decide the whole thing was a horrible mistake.

The guide explains the confusing language of real estate, outlines financing procedure, gives sound tips on what to buy and how to buy. It is in these last categories, perhaps, that the authors make their greatest contribution to the education of the prospective home buyer who is uninited but willing to learn from the experience of others.

NEW YORK (AP) — Business drifted in the summer doldrums during the past week.

The steel and automobile industries operated at a slow pace. The stock market edged lower on a light volume of trading, then came back almost to the starting point.

But there was a sign that the wind is stirring and that the economy's sails soon should be filling out. The first 1961 model automobiles began rolling off assembly lines.

That means there will be big orders for steel and more freight business for the railroads.

The 1961 model production was just a trickle: 1,000 Valiants, 100 Dodge Lancers, and 225 Buick specials.

Automakers accelerated the closing down of 1960-model assembly lines to make the change-over. This reduced the week's output to an estimated total of 102,000 cars from 107,024 the previous week and 108,240 a year ago.

SALES
Sales in July totaled 428,354 cars, down 1.5 per cent from July, 1959. This was the first month this year that sales had fallen below the corresponding month of last year.

Production in July was 434,377 cars, compared with 555,422 a year ago. But output for the first seven months amounted to 4,243,871, about 10 per cent ahead of 1959.

The steel industry boosted output slightly as orders started to dribble in. The week's operating rate was estimated at 55.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 53.3 the previous week.

Steelmakers have been putting pressure on users to place orders now to prevent shutdown of some mills.

The trade publication Iron Age said the bottom apparently has been reached and a sharp upturn should develop after Labor Day. However, Iron Age added that indications are that the fall increase won't be as strong as expected earlier.

TRADE

Retail trade in the past week was unchanged to four per cent higher, depending on the area, than a year ago. Back-to-school buying for children showed a gain, and there was increasing interest in women's fall apparel.

The aircraft industry got a shot in the arm with announcements of plans for big purchases of planes.

The Navy will award Douglas Aircraft Co. contracts totaling 600 million dollars to build 120 missileer planes which will carry air-to-air missiles. The Air Force said it will buy 150 jet transports whose cost will total between 750 and 900 million dollars. Eastern Airlines placed a 44-million-dollar order with Boeing Aircraft Co. for 10 medium-range jet transports.

The Labor Department forecast moderate gains in employment by mid-September, which is usual for that time of the year. Most of the increases are expected in the auto and steel centers. Some gains also are looked for in fabricated metals and electrical machinery.

The First National City of New York reported that business profits declined in the second quarter and that prospects for a record this year are waning. Combined net income of 721 non-financial corporations totaled $3,200,000, down 3 per cent from the first quarter and 12 per cent from the 1959 second quarter.

PRICES

Wholesale food prices shot up sharply, equaling the year's high. The Dun & Bradstreet index, representing the cost at wholesale of one pound each of 31 foods in general use, reached $5.98, compared with $5.91 the previous week.

Briefly around the business scene: General Electric Co. received patents on a process for making synthetic diamonds. . . . The United States plans official exhibits at nine international trade fairs abroad next fall. . . . New York may have another stock exchange: The National Stock Exchange has filed an application with the Securities and Exchange Commission. . . . Production of electricity in the United States hit a new high of 14,746,000 kilowatt hours in the week ended July 30. . . . Sears Roebuck & Co. sales exceeded two billion dollars in the first six months of its fiscal year for the first time.

NEW ASSEMBLY TOOLS BEING MADE

Auto Makers In Midst Of Model Change

DETROIT (AP) — The automakers are in the midst of their annual changeover to new models. Thousands of new tools are being moved into assembly plants to build the 1961 cars. Existing equipment is being altered. Millions of dollars are being spent.

The big question: Is this change necessary? Supporters of the annual change insist it is vital to the general economy and to the economy of the auto industry in particular. They maintain the public wants new styles.

The opposing faction contends change for change sake is useless, wasteful and often detrimental.

CHANGE

The yearly change has been a part of the industry for almost 60 years. However, historian John B. Rae, in his book "American Automobile Manufacturers" pinpoints the demise of the Model T. Ford in 1927 as the time when the annual model change to dominate automobile manufacturing.

"Automobile shows had been held annually since 1900," Rae wrote, "and most producers liked to be able to display some novel feature of technique or styling—not a difficult thing to do in the experimental years of the horseless carriage. Model changes, however, had been overshadowed by the apparently endless line of Model T's, all built to the same pattern."

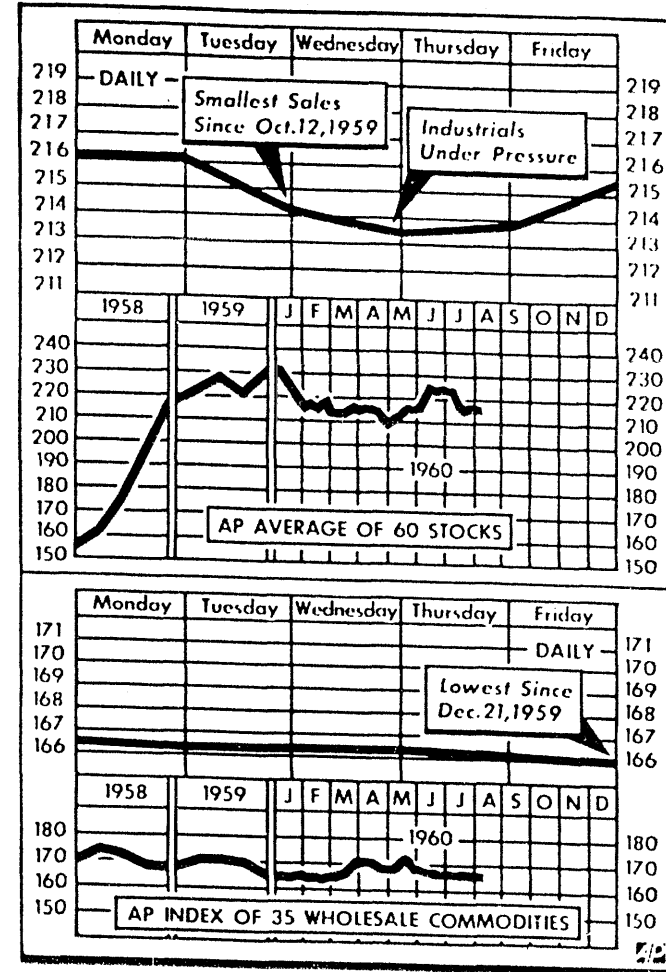

"But now the Model T was gone, and both its successors and its competitors had to face a market condition in which the new car had to offer something ostensibly superior to its still serviceable predecessor."

FEATURE

"Since the annual model was primarily a selling feature, it was inevitable that styling should normally be given more emphasis than technological changes, since major technical improvements cannot be guaranteed to arrive on a 12-month schedule."

Stylists maintain Ford stuck with the Model T so long it lost its dominant position in the industry. "We simply can't afford to

FINANCIAL OIL-GAS NEWS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined last week closing at 215.4 from 216.1 a week ago. The commodity index also was lower, closing at 166.0, the year's low down from 166.4 in the preceding period. (AP Wirephoto)

POLITICAL FOOTBALL

Farm Problem Is Issue In Campaign

NEW YORK (UPI) — Before the farm problem gets kicked around too much in its usual role as a political football in the campaign months ahead, the Farm Journal hopes to get across the voting populace the importance of farming to the U.S. economy.

The farm debate will appear remote and apart from the basic issues to most people because more than 90 per cent of the nation's

New Oil Field Produces 132 Barrels Daily

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Marion County is set for a new oil field find with Texaco Inc.'s wildcat, the Padgett No. 1, sec. 14-2N-12E. A perforated interval at 9,741-47 feet flowed 132 barrels of oil daily with gravity of the crude at 35 degrees on a test with a quarter inch choke.

The new discovery is two miles east of the Knox gas field, but it failed to log commercial gas sands to a depth of 14,025 feet. The Hargrave Oil Corp. No. 1 Peacock, sec. 24-1N-3E, a gas well in the Merit oil field of Simpson County, has been connected to a pipeline outlet. It was drilled to 14,207 feet, failing to log oil sands. The well was completed from perforations in a gas sand at 12,110-52 feet and was reported flowing at 2,500,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Ginther, Warren and Co. were below 11,500 feet in a wildcat, the Holifield No. 1, sec. 18-6N-11W, located one mile north of the Overt field in Jones County.

Reports indicated oil shows in three different zones below 9,000 feet, with the well scheduled to 13,000 feet.

In Smith County, Kern County Land and N. G. Penrose were below 12,900 feet in the Sullivan-Eaton No. 1, sec. 31-1N-8E, a 13,500-foot test. Reports indicated oil shows with the wildcat checking high on structure.

duced his compact Lark as a 1959 model, left it almost totally unchanged for 1960 and has made only minor styling changes for 1961. He has a new engine, which is a technical change.

At Rambler, Romney has maintained what he calls styling continuity. The standard Rambler has undergone some year-to-year changes; the smaller American was held fast. For 1961 the American gets its first major restyling since it originally was introduced in 1950.

REPORT

A report from the survey research center of the University of Michigan says the average consumer looks forward to the new model cars.

The most vocal opponents include George Romney, president of American Motors, and Harold Churchill, president of Studebaker-Packard.

"This mad race to make changes every year is ridiculous," Churchill declared.

Romney has proclaimed himself a "battler against planned obsolescence," a policy of change intended to make a current product look outdated.

M. L. Owens, Jr., a West Monroe banker, was one of the top 16 men in a class of 200 who recently graduated from the School of Banking of the South at the ninth annual commencement exercises at Louisiana State University.

The school, sponsored by the State Bankers Association of 13 southern states, is recognized as an outstanding institute for higher financial studies.

The course, in which Owens ranked with his 16 upper classmates, comprises three years of two-week summer sessions and many hours of work on extension problems and research between school terms.

An increase in sales and earnings for the first six months of 1960 was reported by Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

Two Contenders

Monroe puts two contenders for state championships on the baseball fields this week. L. B. Faulk Post of the American Legion here sees its Brown-Rivers-Scogin machine in the state finals against Tulane Shirts of New Orleans, and Monroe's Dixie League All-Stars enter the state championship tournament at Alexandria.

Both teams are of championship caliber, and there are some local followers of the Dixie club of 13 and 14-year-olds who think their team could give their older Legion Junior brothers a challenge.

New Orleans, which has won 28 of the 33 state championships since Shreveport won the first in 1926, will be here tomorrow night to open the title series with Coach Ralph Sims' B-R-S boys.

The second game is scheduled for New Orleans Wednesday. If a third is necessary it will be played there Thursday.

Coach Sims will be striving to match Woody Boyles' record of two Legion champions for Monroe. Boyles' teams won state championships in 1951 and '52. Sims produced his first here in '57, enabling Monroe to claim second place on the state record of championship producers.

With the exception of New Orleans and Shreveport, no other Louisiana club has won a state championship. Shreveport, in addition to the first, won its only other state crown in '50.

The effort to "rotate" New Orleans out of the state finals failed in its first try this year. The four-south Louisiana Legion districts, tiring of the same teams—mainly New Orleans and Baton Rouge—appearing in the state semi-finals, instituted a rotation system for different inter-district playoffs. The system did result in Lafayette, instead of Baton Rouge, facing New Orleans in the semi-final, but again it was the usual for the state finals.

The pitching of Lynn Causey, Mel Jordan, L. M. Welch, and Neal Gunn has proven too deep so far for their rival batsmen to

Some Small Paragraphs

We had a postcard this week from Ted Heckathorn. You will remember him as a former Morning World sports writer who gave up the work for reasons of health. Ted passes his "regards" to all his friends who, it is desired to write him, can address letters or cards to "Ted Heckathorn, Room 35, Spears Hospital, Denver 29, Colo."

Thirty-two years ago (Aug. 7, 1928, which didn't fall on Sunday) today Gus Kallio had his memorable world's championship wrestling match with Midget Fischer in Chicago. They battled two hours and a half to a no-fall decision won by Kallio. So rugged was the match in the August heat that Fischer lost thirteen and a half pounds. Kallio dropped twelve and three-quarters. They were middleweights, a division Kallio ruled for ten years and then spent 20 years as promoter here.

Now a semi-invalid, Kallio, who sold his wrestling and skating business to August Baumgartner over a year and a half ago, still makes his home here on Jackson street.

Tomorrow a new promoter moves into the Walnut street arena Kallio popularized.

Ralph L. Fox, well known here in the hardware business and son-in-law of lumberman-police juror L. B. Pettit, has bought out Baumgartner's interest and takes over as the new promoter Monday.

A football rules clinic for the Northeast Louisiana High School Football Officials Association will be held here Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Northeast Louisiana State College administration building.

T. H. Waters, state prep athletic commissioner, in announcing the clinic here, said similar meetings are scheduled for Lake Charles, tomorrow; Alexandria, Tuesday; Shreveport, Wednesday; New Orleans, August 15; Baton Rouge, August 16; Lafayette, August 17; and Hammond, August 24.

NOW THEY'RE TRADING

Firing Manager Gets New Twist

By JERRY GREEN

DETROIT (AP) — Firing the manager, once a relatively routine process, is being done with ruffles and flourishes this zany baseball season.

In yesteryear, all a clubowner had to do was summon the manager, say, "you're fired," hire a coach or minor league skipper, and make an announcement. The job was done.

But things are different in 1960's game of managerial musical chairs. Already six managers have been shorted the uniforms in which they started the season. That's an unusually high total even for a job that always has been perilous at best.

The unprecedented trade last Wednesday in which Cleveland's Joe Gordon and Detroit's Jimmie Dykes swapped jobs was just the climax to an apparent open season on managers.

The pattern was set a day after the National League season opened. Eddie Sawyer's second year as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies was over after his club had played only one 1960 game. Gene Mauch replaced him in the earliest regular season managerial change in baseball history.

A few weeks later, Charlie Grimm's third term as manager of the Chicago Cubs ended. Grimm, hired last fall, ran the Cubs less than 20 games. Owner Phil Wrigley, instead of hiring a coach or minor league, went into the radio booth and gave Lou Boudreau the job. Grimm then took Boudreau's place as a Cub broadcaster. Of course, Boudreau was well qualified. He'd managed Cleveland, Kansas City and Boston before taking up sportscasting.

Then it was Billy Jurges' turn with the Boston Red Sox. He had replaced Mike Higgins in July 1959. Cub President Tom Yawkey fired Jurges after saying a few days before his manager was finally taking a rest. When Jurges finally

Dalrymple's Homer Paces 3-1 Phil Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Clay Dalrymple's two-run homer paced the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-1 victory over Los Angeles Saturday night and gave Robin Roberts his first victory over the Dodgers since 1952.

Dalrymple's second inning homer, with Ken Walters on base, was one of only four hits allowed by Dodger starter Stan Williams, who lost his fourth game against 11 victories.

Roberts, allowing 13 hits, all singles, won his eighth game against 10 defeats. He last beat the Dodgers on Sept. 10, 1958. Williams shut out the Phillies 9-0 two weeks ago.

The Dodgers were scoreless until the ninth when Maury Wills singled to center, Junior Gilliam walked and Norm Larker singled. Wills home with two out. Roberts then got Tom Davis to fly out. Wills and Larker each had three singles.

Dalrymple homered after Walters reached base on an infield error and stole second.

Lee Walls, who had two singles, batted in a run for the Phils in the fifth. He brought in Ruben Amaro, who had reached base on a force out and had advanced on a sacrifice.

Spikes Leads Texans Over Oilers, 27-10

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — With fullback Jack Spikes leading the way, the Dallas Texans defeated the Houston Oilers 27-10 in an American Football League exhibition game before about 10,000 Saturday night.

It was the second victory in a row for the Texans. Houston was making its first start.

Spikes kicked field goals of 22 and 43 yards in the first quarter and then scored touchdowns on runs of 3 and 1 yards in the third period as the Texans sewed up the game with a three-touchdown explosion. Spikes first field goal came after 45 seconds of play.

Dallas' third touchdown in the big third period offensive display came on a 57-yard pass from quarterback Cotton Davidson to halfback Johnny Robinson. Davidson kicked all three extra points.

Houston's scoring came on a 43-yard second quarter field goal by quarterback George Blanda and a 57-yard run by quarterback Charlie Mista in the final half minute of play. Blanda also added the extra point.

It was let loose. Yawkey didn't have to search for a successor. He merely rehired Higgins.

It wasn't long before President Horace Stenham of the San Francisco Giants got into the act. Bill Rigney got the gate because the Giants, pre-season pennant favorites, were in second place. Tom Sheehan, a veteran scout with no major league managerial experience, was named interim manager. The appointment soon was made permanent—for the rest of the 1960 season anyway.

The managerial front remained serene for several weeks before Frank Lane and Bill DeWitt, two of baseball's better showmen conjured up the one to top them all. DeWitt, Detroit's president, admits it all started as a joke during trade discussions with Lane, Cleveland's general manager.

"We were talking over player deals when I said, 'Let's really make a big trade. Let's trade managers,'" DeWitt recalled.

"About 10 days later, Lane called me back and said, 'Were you serious?' and I thought why not? It might not be a bad idea after all."

Meanwhile, 10 managers who've handled their teams since spring training at least must be wondering: "Will I happen to me?"

Bob Cochran, Aaron Reach Duluth Finals

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — A middle-aged campaigner from Missouri and a young stylist from Georgia shot their way into the final of the 58th Western Amateur Golf Championship Saturday.

Gray-haired Bob Cochran, 47-year-old part-time salesman from St. Louis, matched par with Northland Country Club's hilly acres, to oust Herb Durham of Dallas 3 and 2.

Walker Cupper Tommy Aaron, 23, a University of Florida graduate from Gainesville, Ga., knocked seven strokes from Phil Rodgers of San Diego, Calif., 4 and 3.

Saturday's final will be the fifth straight day of 36-hole match play in this one of the world's most gruelling tournaments.

Despite a nagging backache, Cochran sailed through his 164th hole in six days by nursing a 3-up lead through the last 15 holes, all of which were halved.

The 1960 British Amateur runner-up escaped with a half when he took a six on the par 4 25th hole. It was the decisive point for the Missourian.

The key to Aaron's victory was an explosion from a sand trap to within 3 inches of the cup on the 30th hole, where he gained his par. The young Georgian preserved his 2-up advantage, then won the next two holes with pars and closed out with a par on the 33rd.

B-R-S Legion Club Seeks To End Long N.O. Reign

Brown - Rivers - Scogin of

Monroe, probably the best school baseball team assembled here in years, aims to shatter the almost complete dominance by New Orleans entries in the championships opening at Legion Stadium Monday night.

Since the program was inaugurated in 1926, teams from the Crescent City have walked away with the title 8 times. Twice the crown has gone to Shreveport and three times to Monroe, the last time in 1957.

Monday night against the Tulane Shirts club of New Orleans, chez, Miss., twice in exhibition affairs.

B - R - S won the regular season league title with a 13-2 record, then reeled off six straight wins to annex the district and bi-district crowns. After an opening loss to Lake Charles, Monroe whipped the Skippers 5-2 and 3-1, to gain the finals.

Tulane Shirts polished off Shell-Royal of Lafayette twice in a row in their semifinal series.

Sims can dip into his "Big Four" pitching staff for a starting pitcher against Tulane. Available for duty are right-handers Mel Jordan (5-0) and Neal Gunn (5-1) or left-handers Lynn Causey (7-1) or L. M. Welch (2-0).

Jordan, the curveballer who lists a no-hitter among his victories, is the mainstay of the mound corps and has fanned 61 batters in 40 2-3 innings.

Leading the B - R - S nine at the plate will be catcher Eddie Kincaid and Jordan, who 21.8 o plays third base. Both are hitting at a .365 clip and each has drove in 21 runs. Jordan paces the club in doubles with nine and has three triples and a home run.

The other .300 swingers are outfielder Jim Vestal (.317) a shortstop James Cromwell (.301) Cromwell, a speedster, has legged out five triples and stolen 21 bases, twice getting four in a game.

Rounding out the starting infield will probably be first baseman Carl Gunn (.265) and second baseman Joey McGinn (.190) or Charley Biggar (.250). With Vestal in the outfield are Ralph Roberts (.278) and Gunn (.291).

As a team, Monroe has posted a .262 batting mark.

Officials of the Monroe club yesterday expressed thanks for cooperation received from state officials in arranging the playoffs thus far. Singled out for their contributions were James D. Smiley, state baseball commissioner, J. T. Spencer of Farmerville, fifth district commissioner, and Norwood Richard of Opelousas, seventh district head.

Brewer was operated on by Dr. B. Herold Griffith. It was reported the operation was successful, and that it probably will be two weeks before the packing is removed and Brewer will be released from the hospital.

He may be able to pitch again within 4 to 6 weeks.

Wrigley said that he could not make an official protest against Giles' ruling because of his dual role as club owner and league vice president. Wrigley said, however, he thought other league clubs might "have something to say about the situation."

Giles has acted and he has the last word," said Wrigley. "But I can say what I think and how I feel about a very wishy-washy ruling."

Giles said his decision was made only after a thorough investigation, after his representatives had conferred with League Redleg Manager Fred Hutchinson. Brewer, Cub Manager Lou Boudreau, with the game's four umpires, "with additional disinterested parties."

Martin, who suffered a serious jaw fracture last year when hit by a pitch, contended he was dealt with very unfairly.

Kalingo Scores TKO Over Petros

GUAM (AP) — Philippine welterweight Rocky Kalingo threw a sizzling series of rights to knock down Guam's Pete Petros three out in the first 40 seconds of a scheduled 10-round bout Saturday.

It was the 45th victory in 57 bouts for the 146-pound Kalingo, and the fourth loss in 13 bouts for Petros, who weighed 132.

League Leaders Rally For Three

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dick Croat's RBI single capped a three-run 10th inning rally Saturday and gave the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates an 8-7 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The outburst, climaxed by Croat's hit that scored Don Hoak, enabled right-hander Vern Law to record his 15th victory-tops in the majors. Law staggered the distance and allowed 11 hits, including a two-run homer by the Giants' Orlando Cepeda that broke a 5-3 tie in the top of the 10th and a two-run pinch homer by Dale Long that tied the score in the ninth.

The Pirates held a 4½-game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals who moved back into second place with a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati.

Gino Cimoli opened with a single and Smoky Burgess also singled. Another single by Hoak scored Cimoli. Dick Schofield, running for Burgess, came across on Bill Virdon's sacrifice fly.

Lefty Johnny Antonelli, coming on in the ninth in relief of Sherman Jones and starter Juan Marchal, was charged with the defeat.

Cepeda's 19th home run in the 10th scored Willie Mays who had singled. Long sent the game into extra innings with his third home run. He scored behind Billy O'Dell, running for Dave Philley who singled.

Until Lone's blast, Law and the Pirates held a 3-3 advantage.

Bob Skinner got his 13th home run, a solo effort, in the opening inning for the Pirates.

In the third, San Francisco bounced back for two runs on Bob Schmidt's single. Don Blasingame's triple and Jim Davenport's single.

But the Pirates picked up a pair in their half of the third on walks by Virdon and Rocky Nelson and Cimoli's triple.

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Led by Ben Warley and John Barnhill, both products of Tennessee State, the Cleveland Pipers Saturday night beat the U.S. Olympic team 101-96 in overtime.

This first exhibition contest in a four-game series drew a sellout crowd of 4,700 to Memorial Auditorium.

The Olympians trailed 88-87 with only seconds remaining in regulation time, when Adrian Smith of Kentucky sent the game into overtime by converting a free throw.

The Pipers, of the National Industrial Basketball League, started fast in the overtime and netted six straight points on field goals by Jack Adams and Warley and two free throws by Dan Swartz.

The 6-foot-7 Warley scored 26 points, while Barnhill had 21.

Oscar Robertson, the fabulous Cincinnati ace, was high man for the Olympians with 20 points after being held to six in the first half.

Jerry West of West Virginia tallied 17 and Smith had 12. Jerry Lucas of Ohio State, who played only about half the game, contributed 10.

Big 10 Action May Wreck Other Teams

CHICAGO (AP) — The Big Ten's punitive action in barring Indiana from the football championships this fall for recruiting violations could help snarl the conference race for the other schools.

Indiana will play its schedule, but conference games will not count, either for the Hoosiers or their Big Ten opponents.

The Hoosiers will play all schools except Wisconsin and Iowa.

Particularly on the spot is Michigan State. The Spartans and Iowa are the only teams with six conference games scheduled. The others have seven.

But since Michigan State has one with Indiana, in reality it now only has five league dates. One defeat, giving it a 4-1 record, quite possibly could keep out of the championship.

The punishment the Big Ten meted out to Indiana was a little two-edged," said Michigan State Athletic Director Biggie Munn. "It certainly affects us and I intend to talk to Tug (Wilson, commissioner) about it."

A six-game schedule hurt the Spartans last season. They finished second with 4-2, while Wisconsin won with 5-2.

What really would hurt would be losing the championship because of the absence of an Indiana game in the standings. Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State and Purdue all meet Indiana and instead of seven conference games now will have six.

Whereas a 6-1 or 5-2 might take the title, a 5-1 or 4-2 may not.

Ellis Clary, Washington Senator coach, led the Florida State League in stolen bases with 61 in 1957.

The meeting will be held in Columbus Aug. 23 and 24.

DYKES FIRES BLAST

More Controversy Hits Detroit Club

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers had two more controversies going Saturday, one involving the manager they just fired and another concerning his replacement.

Deposed Jimmie Dykes ripped President Bill Dewitt of the Tigers, the man who fired him earlier this week. Dykes said he resented Dewitt's clubhouse visits, his suggestions on how to run the club and the way Dewitt ignored his advice on trades.

Dykes, who switched managing jobs with Joe Gordon when the Cleveland Indians and the Tigers got together Wednesday on the firing-hiring arrangement, said Dewitt called him, sent him telegrams on the road with recommendations on the lineup and which players to use.

The two tangled as far back as spring training, but at the time both denied there had been any disagreement.

The 63-year-old Dykes, who had six big league managing jobs, told friends in confidence that he did not like Dewitt's spring training jitters and the way the president kept reminding him of team and individual statistics.

"You don't know the half of it," Dykes said when Dewitt fired him and hired Gordon. "I got so fed up with it that I finally went to Rick Ferrell (Dewitt's assistant) and told him that if Dewitt sent me another telegram, I'd take it right to the newspapers."

Dykes said he did not receive another wire.

"But I knew I was finished," he said off the record, "and it didn't matter."

Dykes made his complaints public in the Detroit Free Press. Informed of Dykes' statements, Dewitt said: "I'm not going to say anything until I have had a chance to digest the article. I don't want to blast the guy (Dykes) and lower the boom on him."

"I'll think it over and talk with Ferrell — until then, I don't want to comment on any part of it," Dewitt had another problem to settle. He met with Gordon to discuss another story, published in the Detroit News. It said Dewitt would not be welcome in the Tiger clubhouse with Gordon as manager.

"I didn't say anything of the sort," Gordon stormed. "If Mr. Dewitt wants to come into the clubhouse anytime, he's welcome. He's the boss."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Safety Director Louis Rosenberg Saturday banned fans from carrying canned or bottled drinks of any kind into Forbes Field, effective Tuesday night.

Rosenberg acted at the request of Pittsburgh Pirates officials, who said "the greatly increased number of cans and bottles that have been brought into our park in recent months has created a serious situation."

SPORTS HOST VOLS TODAY

Southerland Stops Sterlington, 1 To 0

If Fred Southerland could pitch every game, the Monroe Sports would be leading the La-Ark League.

The second-place Sports got another great pitching performance from the once-beaten southpaw yesterday afternoon, a three-hitter that blanked Sterlington, 1-0. Southerland stopped Dubach on a no-hitter in his last start.

Monroe plays host to third-place West Monroe at 2:30 this afternoon in Legion Stadium and local fans will get a chance to

Lions Report Tuesday P.M. For Physicals

Coach Bob Ellen of Ouachita Parish High School yesterday said all OPHS boys who anticipate coming out for football with the Lions this season should report to the school gymnasium Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock for the purpose of taking their physical examinations.

Coach Ellen said those boys who have not yet turned in their money for the football camp will also complete this business Tuesday.

After a couple of days training at Lions Stadium, Coach Ellen is expected to take his squad to Camp Ki-Ro-Li for eight or ten days of training and get them back in time for school to open August 29.

49ers Squeeze By Surprising Cowboys, 16-10

SEATTLE (AP)—An intercepted pass in the last half minute choked off a rally by the Dallas Cowboys and saved a 16-10 victory for the San Francisco 49ers in a National Football League exhibition game Saturday.

Making their debut, the underdog Cowboys showed surprising line power and defense, but made few threats until the final period.

San Francisco scored first in the second quarter, on a Dallas punt attempt, rookie center Jim O'Hara snapped the ball over kicker Dave Sherer's head into the end zone. Sherer recovered, but was tackled by Gordon Kelley of the 49ers for a two-point safety.

The Californians then rolled up 99 yards in six plays to add seven more points. John Brodie hitting Dee Mackey on a 34-yard pass play for the touchdown.

The first real Dallas threat was climaxed by Fred Cones' 17-yard field goal.

The 49ers stormed back to a touchdown, C.R. Roberts going the final four yards and Tommy Davis booting his second conversion.

Little Eddie LeBaron then quarterbacked the Cowboys to a touchdown set up by Tom Franckhauser's pass interception on the San Francisco 37. LeBaron hit Frank Clarke on a 56-yard pass play, and Cone added the conversion.

The Cowboys had marched 36 yards to threaten again when Dave Baker's interception insured the victory for San Francisco.

Colts 18-Point Favorites To Beat College All-Stars

By JERRY LISKA Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP)—The champion Baltimore Colts of the National Football League are rated favorites by 18 points over the College All-Stars in their Friday night match in Soldier Field.

CUBS WIN

Anderson's 5-Hit Job Stops Braves

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The lowly Chicago Cubs dealt Milwaukee another crushing blow Saturday by defeating the Braves 3-2 on Bob Anderson's masterful five-hit.

The loss dropped the pennant-minded Braves five full games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates who edged the San Francisco Giants 8-7 in 10 innings.

Anderson, a 24-year-old, 6-4 right-hander, baffled the Braves in earning his fifth victory against seven losses. It was only the third complete game for Anderson in 21 starts this season.

The Cubs jumped on Milwaukee starter Juan Pizarro for two runs in the first and then added what proved to be the decisive tally in the sixth.

Bob Will lead off the game with a single and Richie Ashburn walked. After Ernie Banks, playing in his 600th straight game, lined out, George Altman singled to fill the bases. Frank Thomas followed with a double down the left field line, scoring Will and Ashburn.

The Cubs put together singles by Santo and El Tappe and a wild pitch by Pizarro for their third run in the sixth.

the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., faces the sternest job yet in his three years of grooming the collegiate squad for the contest with the NFL champion.

This is not the most talented All-Star squad by far. A number of 1959 collegiate hotshot seniors, committed to the new American Football League and Canadian football, will be missing.

For instance, Louisiana State's Billy Cannon and Mississippi's Charlie Flowers are among those toiling in the camps of the AFL, which is starting this season as a rival to the long-established National League.

In his first year at the All-Star helm, Graham directed the 1958 collegians to a 35-19 upset of the Detroit Lions. It was the biggest All-Star score in the 26-game series.

Last year, the Colts spanked the All-Stars, 29-0, for the 16th pro victory against eight All-Star triumphs and two ties in the classic sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities Inc.

This time, with one of the smallest All-Star squads, numerically, Graham must hope for terrific improvement by his 47-player unit by Friday night. The Stars lost 30-14 in a scrimmage against the Chicago Bears last Tuesday.

Although the All-Stars have some 25 athletes weighing 220 pounds or heavier, the Bears didn't have too much trouble shoving them around.

Two of the brightest spots on offense against the Bears were the running of Marquette's 215-pound Frank Mestnik at fullback, and the passing of Southern Methodist's Don Meredith.

It may be Meredith's arm that will prove the most effective weapon against the massive, mauling Colts defense.

The other two All-Star quarterbacks, George Izo of Notre Dame and Marquette's Pete Hall, also were exceptional college passers.

Targets for the All-Star sharpshooters will be plentiful, provided they can maneuver through the talented Colt secondary and the All-Star line can stave off the likes of Big Daddy Lipscomb, Gino Marchetti.

All-Star offensive ends include Mississippi Southern's Hugh McInnis, Notre Dame's Monty Stickles, Carroll Dale of Virginia Tech, and two Washington State stars, Gail Cogdill and Don Ellerick.

Potential receivers also include halfbacks Prentice Gault of Oklahoma, Ed Kovac of Cincinnati and Dick Bass of College of Pacific.

What the All-Star defense can do against the passing of Baltimore's expert Johnny Unitas is conjectural. The roof will cave in on the collegians unless they can somehow thwart Unitas' shots to such Colt receivers as Ray Berry, Jim Mutscheller and Lenny Moore.

Pass defense will be the chore of such All-Stars as George's Charlie Britt, Detroit's Bruce Mahler, Purdue's Ross Fichtner, Indiana's Ted Auerman, and Ellerick, the Washington State end who probably will play both ways.

Graham's preparations have been hampered by injury-caused loss of three standouts—performers, halfback Jim Mooney of Arkansas; guard Roger Davis of Syracuse; and halfback Don Perkins of New Mexico.

The All-Stars have some beefy linemen to match Colt bulk, including Roger Brown of Maryland State (290), Earl Butler (250) and Don Stallings (254) of North Carolina (254), Lou Cordileone of Clemson (250), Charles Janerette of Penn State (245), Bill Lapham of Iowa (240) and Andy Slynchula of Penn State (240).

This 27th consecutive game in the All-Star series, which has contributed more than 2 million dollars to charity since its inaugural in 1934, will be telecast and broadcast nationally (ABC, 9 p.m., EST).

NEW CLEVELAND skipper Jimmy Dykes, with tobacco-chewing Rocky Bridges standing next to him, looks over his Cleveland Indians on his second day as manager. The 63-year-old Dykes, a new pilot for the sixth time, won his first game Friday night but his club lost yesterday when Bridges made an error in the seventh, letting in two runs as the Orioles won, 5-2. McDANIEL WINS 8TH

Cards Tip Reds, Retake Second

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Seventh-inning solo homers by Walt Moryn and Curt Flood gave St. Louis a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati Saturday and lifted the Cards back into second place.

Reliable Lindy McDaniel pitched the last three innings, blanking the Reds and striking out five to raise his record to 8-3.

Flood's eighth homer, which followed Moryn's fifth, came on an 0-2 pitch. The Red Birds now are a half game ahead of Milwaukee and 4½ games behind league-leading Pittsburgh in the National League race. Milwaukee lost Saturday, Pittsburgh won.

It was an uphill, team victory for the Cards who fell behind 5-0 in the first 3½ innings as the Reds scored single runs in the first and fourth and three in the second off starter Ernie Broglio.

A double by Eddie Kasko and Wally Post's single accounted for the first score, and a walk, Chico Cardenas' single, Kasko's second double and Vada Pinson's single brought in three in the second. In the fourth, Cliff Cook slammed his first major league home run for the final Reds' run.

The Cards called on pinch hitters to dispose of Jim Maloney in the fourth. Ken Boyer and Moryn started the three-run burst with singles, and Flood walked to set the stage for Carl Sawatski, who singled home two, and Stan Musial, hitting for Broglio, who brought home Flood with another single.

Ed Bauta took over and pitched a scoreless fifth and sixth, and the Cards notched another on Boyer's single and Moryn's triple off Joe Nuxhall to move to within one in the fifth.

COX NAMED

Seven Louisiana Gridders To Play In Prep Classic

BATON ROUGE, LA. (Special) The finest high school football players in Louisiana—seven in number—will play in the All America High School Football Classic, set for Saturday, August 20 at Memorial Stadium.

Buddy Hamie, 6-2, 195-pound fullback from Crowley; Mickey Cox, 6-2, 230-pound tackle from Neville of Monroe; Remi Prudhomme, 6-4, 202-pound end from Opelousas; Jerry Young, 6-4, 218-pound end from Lafayette; Ken Newton, 6-0, 171-pound halfback from Delhi; Bill Truax, 6-5, 235-pound end from Holy Cross of New Orleans; and Jim Turner, 6-1, 195-pound guard from Baton Rouge are the All Americans.

Everyone of the Louisiana stars come to the All America game with honors and scrapbooks loaded with impressive press raves.

Hamie, the Crowley star, scored 117 points in last fall's competition. He crossed the goal 16 times and booted 21 extra points.

The LSU-bound fullback will probably handle the South's punting. He booted the pigskin 933 yards in 22 attempts for La 42.4 yard average—something quite remarkable for a schoolboy.

On the ground, Hamie hit the line 104 times and spilled opponents for 1,332 yards, or better than six yards a carry. Crowley's defense was also built around Hamie, with more than 18 tackles a game.

An all-around athlete, as well as a tremendous football star, Hamie has won all-state mention in basketball and track. A javelin throw of 207'6" and shot put heave of 53'9", both for state records are owned by this remarkable young Crowley athlete.

Mickey Cox, the 230-pound mammoth from Neville High School of Monroe, has been boomed by many players, fans, writers, and coaches as the greatest lineman ever seen in North Louisiana prep circles.

An exceptionally fast lad for his size, Cox does an excellent job of pulling out of the line and running interference. A tribute to his agility is the fact that he handled Neville's punting and kick-offs.

Also a future LSU star, Cox played inside linebacker on the 5-4 defense. He was named to the Wigwag Wisemen of America's first team Prep All America squad.

The Monroe lad will be just one of three Cox boys on the South team to confuse both fans and players alike. Darrell Cox, a 170-pound halfback from Miami, was voted the outstanding football player in Florida. Walter Cox, 200-pound lineman from Clemson, S. C., also scored an outstanding prep career in football, basketball, and track.

Big Remi is a slow-spoken youth who walks with a silent in football, basketball, and track. He is an excellent dash man on the cinders.

Bill Truax is an athlete who'll hold down his wing spot in any league—high school, college, or professional. The 6-5, 235-pounder from Holy Cross of New Orleans, brought bright delight and evasions of great things from the LSU staff when he signed with the Bengals.

A lad who confuses people with his address—his home is Gulfport, Miss.—and his school, Holy Cross of New Orleans, plans to enter LSU's pre-dental school. He was a "boarding student" at Holy Cross.

Under Coach John Kalbacher, Truax was all-district and all-state in football.

The 17-year-old athlete averaged 17-points a game in basketball and was an all-district selection. He also won all-state acclaim as a track star in 1959.

The lone Baton Rouge entry in the All American contest this year is Istrouma's Jim Turner.

The 6-1, 195-pound guard saw three years of varsity action under Coach J. E. Brown.

Coach Vernon Stockwell, former line coach, reports that Jim made excellent progress throughout his scholastic career.

"More important than his excellent football ability," added Coach Stockwell, "Jim has the moral standards so needed for this game."

Baton Rouge was represented by three All Americans in 1959—Steve Ward and Lynn Amodee of Istrouma and Gary Kinchen of Baton Rouge High. Pete Ascani, New Orleans, and Danny Neumann, Tallulah, were other Pelican State stars.

BEDS LEFT

ROME (AP)—Olympic officials said Saturday approximately 2,000 beds in small hotels, boarding houses and dormitories still were available for every night during the Aug. 5-Sept. 11 games. They denied reports of a sellout but added that all major hotels were booked solid.

Relay Scrap Heads Monday B&B Program

Rod Rivera and Bob Morrow take on bad brothers Tony and Jessi Jimenez in the tag team main event at B&B Arena Monday night.

Two girls trade holds in the evening's semifinal, Jessica Rogers and Nell Stewart, Morrow and Tony Jimenez meet in the 10-minute opener.

Both the semifinal and final will have hour limits with two fall to win.

Miss Rogers made her local debut last week by defeating Miss Stewart via disqualification in a 15-minute affair. Nell plans to win this time but has no intention of curbing her rough stuff.

The Jimenez brothers are bad enough one at a time but together they're really tough to handle. Both boys once played it clean but have turned into villains, two of the worst around.

Rivera and Morrow are among the better "scientific" grapplers in the business. Rod last week battled Adrian Baellangon to a draw in a southern heavyweight title clash.

25-YEAR ERA

Oklahoma Edges Irish As Leading Grid Power

By BOB HOOBING
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oklahoma shades Notre Dame as collegiate football king for the 25-year golden era launched by Col. Biff Jones in 1935.

The Sooners began a revival under Jones which resulted in three national championships, unbeaten records in six regular seasons and 17 conference titles over a quarter century.

From 1935 through 1959, Oklahoma teams won 192 games, lost 48 and tied 12 — averaging eight victories for every 10 starts.

Notre Dame, only .011 behind in percentage, has a 180-48-13 mark. Tennessee, Army, Michigan State, Ohio State, Duke, Penn State, Georgia Tech and Michigan complete the first 10 in The Associated Press survey.

Jones' military training and Louisiana Gov. Huey Long had a hand in shaping Oklahoma's gridiron future.

Despite a successful tenure at Louisiana State, Jones resigned in 1934 after refusing Long's request to address the team at halftime. The break put Jones in a receptive mood to the call from Norman, Okla.

The same disciplined mind which balked at outside interference made Jones the superb organizer Oklahoma needed as coach and athletic director.

remaining due to Jones' effort, the Irish tallied their third touchdown in the last five minutes for an 18-13 upset.

Since the coaching firm of Wilkinson and Gomer Jones assumed control of Sooner football in 1947, Oklahoma teams have a 121-13-3 over-all record and a 72-1-3 showing against Big Eight conference competition.

Biff Jones laid a firm foundation in two years at Norman before he was transferred to an Army post. Successor Tom Stidham's 1938 aggregation was unbeaten until it met Tennessee in the Orange Bowl. The loss was only one of two the Sooners were to suffer in nine post-season encounters.

Under Wilkinson, Oklahoma established an all-time victory streak of 47 and a consecutive game scoring spree of 123, both of which Notre Dame snapped, 7-0, in 1957.

The Biff Jones rejuvenated ground attack heralded things to come. Oklahoma set the record for most net rushing yards a game—391.0—in 1956. Starting in 1949, the Sooners have led the nation in rushing three times and ranked second on three other occasions.

Notre Dame, traditional measuring rod of gridiron excellence, has lost the same number of games as Oklahoma over 25 years and holds a 3-1 margin in head-on collisions with the Sooners, but finishes second as a result of having played fewer contests.

From 1935 when Bill Shakespear's pass to Wayne Miller beat the clock—and Ohio State—Notre Dame has had only one losing season. The Irish enjoyed six unbeaten campaigns under Fran Leahy.

The survey shows the South the leading sector with nine representatives among the top 25 teams compared to five each from the Midwest and East.

INDIANS FALL, 5-2

Boot Opens Way For Orioles Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — An error by Cleveland third baseman Rocky Bridges enabled Baltimore to come from behind with two unearned runs in the seventh inning Saturday and the Orioles went on to beat the Indians 5-2.

Bridges, trying to catch an infield fly that would have ended the inning, dropped the ball and two runs came in.

The winner was Hal (Skinny) Brown, the second of three Baltimore pitchers, who faced only six batters in the two innings he worked. The victory was his eighth in 12 decisions.

Starter Jack Harshman (1-2) was the loser.

Ron Hansen hit a home run for Baltimore, and rookie Mike de la Hoz homered for the Indians.

The Orioles opened the scoring in the fourth with Hansen's 12th homer, two-out shot over the left field fence. But the Indians took a 2-1 lead in the home half on De la Hoz' leadoff homer over the left field fence, a walk to Vic Power and singles by Jim Piersall and Bridges.

The Orioles went ahead 3-2 in the seventh on Bridges' error. Gus Triandos walked to lead off the inning, and Hansen followed with a line drive double that bounced off the top of the fence in left field. With two balls and no strikes on the next batter, Harshman was lifted for Barry Latman, who struck out two batters, then got Jackie Brandt to hit an infield fly. Bridges dropped the ball near the mound and Triandos and Hansen scored. Gene Woodling fled to center to end the inning.

Baltimore scored two insurance runs off Don Newcombe in the eighth. Brooks Robinson led off with a single to right field and Bob Boyd beat out a bunt to third base. Both runners advanced on a sacrifice by Triandos when Newcombe made a late throw to third. Robinson scored on a double play, and Boyd came home on a single by Billy Klaus.

ROGERS DRIVES IN SIX RUNS

Maris Leads Yankees Over Kansas City Cousins, 16-4

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Roger Maris walloped two homers and drove in six runs Saturday as the New York Yankees smothered the Kansas City Athletics 16-4 and maintained their 2½ game lead in the American League.

Southpaw Bill Short and Duke Maas subdued the A's hitters with the exception of Bill Tuttle, who hit two solo home runs. Short, who pitched 5 2-3 innings, was credited with his third victory. He has lost four.

Maris' homers were his 34th and 35th of the year, putting him far in the lead in both major leagues. He raised his RBI total to 91, three more than National League leader Ernie Banks.

The Chicago White Sox, in second place, and the Baltimore Orioles, three games out, won Saturday and kept pace in the tight pennant race.

The Yankees poured a blistering attack against the A's in the first five innings, raining 15 hits, off four Kansas City hurlers, good for 14 runs.

They started in the first inning off right-hander Dick Hall (6-8), who was the loser.

Singles by Mickey Mantle, Maris and Bill Skowron scored the first Yankee run. After going down in order in the second, the New Yorkers scored two more in the third as Maris hit the first of his two circuit shots with Tony Kubek on base by an error. Then they chased Hall in the fourth when they scored four times. A single by Bob Cerv and doubles by Cleis Boyer and Short accounted for two runs and brought Marly Kutyna to the mound for Kansas City. Singles by Kubek and Mantle scored two more.

Kutyna gave away to a pinch hitter in the A's half of the inning, and Johnny Briggs came on to pitch in the fifth. The Yankees routed him in a hurry with three straight hits and went on to score seven runs. Three were charged against Ned Garver who relieved Briggs and was tagged for Maris' second home run, a tremendous wallop to right field that scored Mantle and Kubek.

Maris drove in his sixth run with a sacrifice fly after 'Kubek and Mantle singled in the seventh, and the final Yankee run came in the eighth when Cerv doubled and scored on Boyer's single.

Aside from Tuttle's two homers, the A's got a run in the second when Dick Williams singled, went to second on a passed ball, took third after a fly out and scored as Pete Daley grounded out. They got another in the eighth on Jerry Lumpe's triple and Russ Snyder's single.

The Yankees, who have won 10 of their last 13 games, have lost only three times to the Athletics.

One of America's newest and fastest-growing sports, sports car competition, has come to the Twin Cities with the formation of the Scudario - Washitaw Sports Car Club and two rallies are scheduled for Monroe, the first one next Sunday.

A Jim Conner event will be held at the Twin City Shopping Center parking lot on Louisville next Sunday at 2 o'clock and a short distance rally will be held beginning at the same spot Sunday, Aug. 21. Also, a hill climb is slated for Plain Dealing Aug. 28, with local entries to assemble at the Twin City lot at 9 o'clock that morning.

The Jim Conner event tests driving skill with the cars going through an obstacle course with the car finishing the fastest winning.

In the shortest distance rally, the entries are given a destination and the car reaching the destination with the lowest number of miles wins! This rally will be over the back roads of the parish.

The Scudario - Washitaw club, which meets every first Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the Paragon, is open to anyone owning a sports or foreign car. Dues are $10 per year for husband and wife.

According to the club's publicity chairman, Mrs. Loretta Roden, wives are urged to join the club along with their husbands since most events require a driver and a navigator, usually the wife.

Robert Kellogg is the president of the new club, Jerry Roden is vice president, Frances Benton secretary and Jim Wells treasurer.

The group plans at least one event each month.

INSURANCE CITY OPEN

Fleck Nabs Lead With Sizzling 65

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Jack Fleck, 38-year-old former National Open champion, Saturday bounced into the 54-hole lead in the $30,000 Insurance City Golf Tournament with a 65 for a 14-under-par total of 199.

With one round left, the lean veteran from Los Angeles held a two-stroke lead over Bill Collins of Crystal River, Fla.

Other close challengers were Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., 202; Wes Ellis of West Caldwell, N.J., and Ken Venturi of Palo Alto, Calif., with 203s, and Arnold Palmer of Ligonier, Pa., and Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., with 204s.

Fleck, who has been troubled by a back ailment and has failed to finish in his last four tournaments, showed no signs of pain as he blasted to the front at the par 35-36-71 Wethersfield Country Club.

In 1955, he defeated Ben Hogan in a playoff to win the U.S. Open. Fleck, in a threesome with Dick Knight of Apple Valley, Calif., the second-day leader, and Lionel Hebert of Lafayette, La., played without benefit of the large crowd of 7,000 most of the way.

Hardly anybody saw him eagle the par 498-yard second hole, the highlight of the day. His approach landed 2 feet to the right of the green, and he holed a 25-footer.

He birdied the sixth and seventh. He birdied the sixth and seventh and couldn't be caught after that. Coming in, he birdied the 11th, 12th, and 13th before the gallery, which had followed Palmer, Hawkins, and Dave Ragan or Orlando, Fla., caught up with him.

Best way to get one's mind off the weather is to go to a party . . . Any kind of a party . . . Any time of day . . . On any occasion. . . This week visitors and newcomers have been the inspiration for festive gatherings.

Newcomer JANE SARTOR was named guest of honor when HELEN LEDBETTER and Cissy Ryan entertained at a conversational hour at Bayou DeSiard country club Friday morning. As they greeted the guests, Helen was wearing a white silk shirtwaist embroidered with blue flowers. Cissy chose a cotton striped in beige and shades of brown; and Jane, a black polished cotton. . . Special guest at the party was Jane's mother, MRS. T. M. SAYRE of Rayville.

The table on the club porch was covered with a pale green cloth. A copper-washed pewter bowl filled with magnolias served as a centerpiece. Lemonade was passed, with tiny finger sandwiches, dainty tea cakes, and miniature pecan halves. Some seventy guests called to meet the honoree.

Saturday night the D. V. LOPLINS hosts at a dinner at Bayou DeSiard country club honoring the CURTIS BOYCES, newcomers from Baton Rouge. Shirley chose to wear for the occasion beige linen trimmed with white lace, while Mary Alice wore a dinner dress of pale yellow raw silk.

The U-shaped table, with places marked for seventy guests, was set up in the main ballroom. Arrangements of pale yellow gladioli were held by three white Biscuit cupids placed down the table. Ribbon aspic was served as a first course, followed by chicken curry, with peach tarts for dessert.

Former MONROVIAN MYRTLE (MRS. H. P.) DURRETT, who visited here from Birmingham with MARY LEE SAUNDERS, was honored at a round of parties last week. BELLE HUSTED was hostess at a coffee at her home Saturday morning. White zinnias and green and white caladium leaves formed a cool setting for conversation and visiting among the twenty old friends who were invited to call . . . FLO and FRED MEYER entertained at dinner, with card games later, at their home on Saturday night . . . The Paragon club was the scene of VANCE BREARD'S luncheon . . . ELSIE STANDLEY honored Myrtle at a bridge party at home . . . and DAISY BELL invited the group for lunch and samba.

Young JOHN BERNHARDT passed his Minnow test at YMCA day camp, and as a reward was treated to a trip to swim in the ocean. With his father, D. C., he enjoyed a "stag" weekend at Grand Isle.

Monday night LUCILLE M'FADDEN was surprised at a birthday party. Some fifteen couples organized the party, brought the dinner, and furnished a lavishly decorated birthday cake. They went up the river on Noe's Ark, and were entertained by Lucille's opening her humorous gifts, each accompanied by a poem.

The SOL COURTMAINS are due home today from Asheville, North Carolina. Sol attended a seminar there this past week.

A group of fifteen Marxes left yesterday for a two week tour through the West. They plan a three-day stop in Yellowstone Park, and three days in Colorado Springs on the return trip. In the party are the SACKMAN MARXES and their children, JILL, PAUL, and BARBARA; the FRED MARXES and DON, PEGGY, ROBBIE, and NERYL BETH; and the HOWARD MARXES of Dallas and their children, CHIP and LINDA.

Members of the Bayou DeSiard country club are looking forward to the August party scheduled for this coming Saturday night. Included on the program will be a style show, dinner, and dance. LALLAGE FEAZEL will give the commentary on fall fashions. Models chosen from the membership will show clothes furnished by seven merchants. Following the style show, a buffet dinner featuring roast beef, chicken curry, and black bottom pie will be served in the dining room. There will be dancing in the main ballroom to the music of the Blue Notes from nine until one.

Following the convention in Chicago the GEORGE SNELLINGS JR., went to Gatlinburg for a week of rest in the mountains. They are due home today.

Tuesday afternoon, JUNE McHENRY entertained at a bridge - luncheon in her newly redecorated home on Forsyth avenue. Following the salad-luncheon, three tables played bridge. Prizes were won by TOMMY SUE SARTOR, high, and HELEN LEDBETTER, low.

June was hostess to a younger group on Thursday, when she invited nine little friends to share son LOUIS' fifth birthday celebration. The group met at Bayou DeSiard club for a swim before a lunch of hamburgers and birthday cake.

Lady Detects Crime, Tracks Down Trickery

By GAY PAULEY
NEW YORK (UPI)—Mrs. Marilyn Picard is equally adept at cooking a fine French meal or cooking up a concoction to help police catch a criminal.

Mrs. Picard, a bubbly brunette of 28, runs the fingerprinting department of her family's firm which manufactures close to 1,000 products used for crime detection.

These include fingerprint inks and powders, camera attachments for closeup work at the scene of a crime or accident, narcotics testers, solutions to detect forgeries of alterations of records, a solution to determine whether a stain is blood or just ketchup, and various sizes of laboratory kits equipped with these and other tools of the trade.

Often, she is summoned as a consultant to help track down trickery, and travels around the nation fingerprinting employees for various companies, demonstrating baby footprinting to hospital staffs, helping police departments set up their fingerprint classification files, and lecturing on fingerprinting at meetings of police chiefs or heads of police identification departments.

She is in Asbury Park, N.J., this week for the New Jersey police chiefs' convention.

Mrs. Picard is one of the few women members of the International Association for Identification. And, she has just completed the development of an inkless, disposable pad for use in hospitals where state law requires footprinting of the newborn.

"I don't like being called an expert," she said. "I may know a lot, but there's a lot I don't know. There was a jet wreck so bad that all they had was part of a man's shoulder, but the FBI made a complete identification from it. Now, that's an expert."

Mrs. Picard was born Marilyn Dondero, only daughter of John A. Dondero, a chemical engineer.

"By the time I was 14, I was coming in the office on Saturdays to help address envelopes," she said in an interview recently. "When my father saw I was interested in his work, he began coaching me on fingerprinting."

"He loved it so much he used to give evening classes. Occasionally he'd let me substitute for him. But eventually we gave up the school—it was just too much."

Her father died three years ago and today her mother, Lisette, heads the firm. Also associated with the firm is her French-born husband, Pierre Picard, whom she met while both were studying business administration at Fordham University.

The Picards have two children, Peter, 5, and Phillip, going on

Personalize Your Rooms With Glass

A collection of glass accessories can give personal distinction to even the simplest of decorating schemes. For true proof that accessories are important, consider two rooms which are basically furnished in almost identical fashion... one will be cozy and interesting. The difference lies purely in the finishing touches—and how they are used.

ly, must have the "props" to create an impression. These should be keyed in color and theme to the furnishings to become a harmonious part of the whole room. For a room with Americana furnishings, there are reproductions (line for line copies of an original) and adaptations (incorporating features of an original piece, but varying in size and/or color) in glass. These are not only relatively reasonable, but they are available in greater quantity and of better quality than ever before. For contemporary rooms, there are both classic and spectacular shapings in decanters, pitchers, bowls, candleholders, etc., that glow in an assortment of rainbow colors.

Frozen Dinners Answer To Oldster's Diet

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oldsters who complain that food tastes bland and insipid shouldn't always blame the cook, says a nutrition expert.

The sense of taste, like those of sight and hearing, dims with advancing age.

Food needs to be especially flavorful and well-seasoned to tempt elderly appetites and induce them to eat a balanced diet, Dr. C. G. King said in an interview.

Dr. King is president of the Nutrition Foundation, Inc., a research organization supported by the food and allied industries to advance the science of good nutrition.

Particular attention should be paid to vegetable preparation. Overcooking not only makes vegetables unappetizing, but it also destroys valuable nutrients, Dr. King said.

The aged have a tendency to eat too little fruit, vegetables, and high quality protein, such as lean meat, fish, eggs and cheese, he said. Many who live alone develop finicky appetites and turn to snack type foods. They're no longer interested in careful preparation of nourishing, attractive, well-balanced meals.

For them, Dr. King suggests good prepared foods, such as frozen dinners packed in individual servings. He said there's "fairly good evidence" that many who live alone are beginning to use such products.

But what of the homemaker whose family includes at least one elderly relative? Must she prepare two separate menus — one for the older and another for the rest of the family?

This course shows poor judgment, Dr. King said. Unless the

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Some of the highlights for the Pine Wood day camp that we think will interest readers will appear in the column this week and next. We are sure campers are still thinking about many of their happy experiences and are looking forward to next year.

First, however, let us give credit to the staff, those volunteers who make Girl Scout camping possible. For the second session the adults who served as unit leaders, assistants, as additional help on overnights, were Mrs. David Clinton Mrs. J. L. Davidson, Mrs. Woodrow Downs, Mrs. E. J. Albritton, Mrs. J. G. Norris, Mrs. R. H. Upshaw, Mrs. John M. Edwards, Mrs. R. R. James all of Farmerville, Mrs. A. B. Gregory, Mrs. B. B. McWhorter, Mrs. D. T. DeMaster, Mrs. O. K. Davis, Mrs. Tom Keller, Mrs. C. E. Vaughan, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Clinton Langley, Mrs. F. Bewick.

Program Aides serving at the second session were Sue Gregory, Tish Poe, Nancy Noland, Janet Noland, Julia Faye Anthony, Frances Byrd, Carol Culepper, Betty Stewart, Linda Upshaw, and Joan Collingsworth, the last three being from Farmerville.

Their satisfactions come from seeing the girls grow in appreciation of the out-of-doors and in self reliance as they enjoy progressively adventurous program in the out-of-doors. Her unit leader received a note from Ginger Due, of Warren, Arkansas, who was a camper while visiting her cousin, Janna Rorex, who said, "I'll never forget how to tie a clove hitch or any of the other skills you taught me. Thank you again for helping me to have such a good time." Expressions like that make all the work worthwhile.

Good news to the visitors who drove over the dusty road to the final campfire is that the Girl Scout road, as it is officially known, is to be blacktopped this summer. It's a good all-weather road, but dusty when there has been no rain for many weeks.

The ultimate in adventure is reached when girls are assigned to Century Oak Unit and allowed to work on the Pioneer badge, which includes a two night primitive camp experience.

Campers of this unit came to camp on Wednesday morning and stayed until after the final campfire Friday night. They pitched their green Girl Scout tents in a grassy plot surrounded by trees and hidden from the rest of the campsite. They dug a grease pit, a latrine, a cache in which to put ice, cooked by patrols on small charcoal stoves, kept clean and comfortable. Putting up mosquito nets was an unusual experience for girls who had never seen one, as was sleeping on a bedroll. If the ground was hard, the girls apparently never knew it, because Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, unit leader, and the camp director, who were in charge, say that by 10:00 each night all was quiet and the girls slept until 7:00, thereby, getting the nine hours' sleep that is a Girl Scout rule for campers.

The first night of the camp the girls became interested in watching the stars come out, an interest they followed up next day by reading star legends, looking at maps. By the second night the girls could readily locate the constellations of the summer sky. This was just another of the new experiences that camp offers. The following took part: Linda Broad, Carolyn Brooks, Brenda Carson, Jean Collingsworth, Marilyn Denoux, Alice Haynes, Julia Hoozemaker, Susie McBride, Jo Anne Patterson, Marilyn Post, Beth Roberts, Mickie Varnado, Kaki Stone, Jane Edwards, Ethel Saulsbury, Carol Culepper, Nancy Clair Noland.

Questions And Answers About Women's Fashions

By FLORENCE de SANTIS
Q: I have bought a very simple white silk cocktail dress in tunic silhouette. What accessories should I wear with it?

A: If the dress is quite undecorated, you can safely give it a little glitter. Silver sandals and a silver clutch bag would be pretty. Crystal jewelry, currently fashionable, is perhaps best with white. If the neckline is a plain scoop, you can use a three-strand necklace, or even a bib type. If the neck is higher, important crystal earrings would be better. But not both at once, please!

Q: My husband and I are planning a trip to Miami during the last of September and early October. We will go by train and will do a lot of touring. What should we take in clothes?

A: Florida at that time of year is still quite warm, so take the summer dresses you would use at home. Since you'll be doing so much touring, it would be wise to take at least five or six, and in drip-dry fabrics for quick laundering in the hotel. They should all have easy or fullish skirts—so much more comfortable when you're sitting, as well as cool.

Your husband can take mostly slacks and sports jackets, and sports shirts, with one or two white shirts for possible dining in good restaurants. You yourself may also use one summer dress of a more dressy type for this purpose.

Florida can be unpredictable, so take a couple of orlon sweaters or sweaters - jackets. A light topcoat may also come in handy.

Your accessories can be rather summery, in light shades or neutral beige. Don't forget a couple of hats, perhaps packable travel ones. That sun can be murder on those unused to it!

Q: A group of women going to a dinner - dance are discussing whether it is proper to wear hats. It is not a formal affair, and most of the women are wearing cocktail or dressy street clothes.

A: A hat like those you'd wear during the daytime would not usually suit the cocktail or dressy dress. It is, however, perfectly proper and pretty to wear hats!

made of veiling, or ribbon, or velvet. The better hat department and the hat bars of your department store usually carry these evening - type hats.

Those who do not wish to wear these are just as proper to go bare-headed. The coiffure, in such cases, should perhaps be a little more elaborate than that worn for day.

Q: I am a widow in my late forties, and I am remarriage in September. It is to be a quiet ceremony, with a small family reception following. My daughter and a friend will be my only attendants. What should we wear?

A: As you probably know, a woman remarriage does not wear white. Nor should you wear a long gown for a quiet ceremony. Depending on what suits your figure best, a dress or costume (jacket - and - dress) can be chosen. The color can be any pastel which looks well on you—wheat, pink, blue, green. The cut should be simple, with a pretty neckline and the elegance of the fabric lending the dressy note.

Your daughter and your friend need not wear the same dress, but the effect will be prettier if they wear the same color, which would be a pastel to accent the color you choose. Small hats can be worn by all of you in lieu of the usual bridal headpieces. Plain matching pumps and white gloves will complete the ensemble.

As flowers should also be kept simple, you may wear a corsage rather than carry a bouquet.

Q: I am sixteen and beginning to get invitations to dances that call for "formals." I have a dress made of sheer white nylon over pink tulle. It has a bateau neck in front, deep V back, large lantern sleeves, full street-length skirt, and wrapped waistline. Is this dress suitable for formal occasions?

A: For a sixteen-year-old girl, this kind of dress is certainly formal enough for all but the few occasions which would call for a full-length gown. Find out if your invitations mean floor-length dance dresses. If not, this dress should be perfect.

Suggestions For Comfort This Summer

By BETTY PEPIS

There was a time when the approach of summer served as a signal for stripping the whole house of all but the most important necessities and slipcovering what was left in uninspired cretonnes. Today's decorator recognizes the need for seasonal change but no longer admits that the bare, drab look is best for beating the heat.

Much of the inspiration for creating an attractive and comfortable summertime decor derives from an area of the world where it is warm much more often than it is cool. In those areas of Spain, France and Italy which border the blue Mediterranean Sea, hot weather is the rule, rather than the exception, and decorating styles are contrived to cater to indoor coolness.

Many of these ideas have been adapted to the American way of life in a series of summer rooms. The lessons they demonstrate offer a series of suggestions, which follow, and which the amateur may adapt to either city or country living during the hot summer months to come.

A slick bare floor is an asset. Those who live along the Mediterranean prefer marble or ceramic tile, both of which feel cool to the touch as well as looking cool. Lacking this, the average homemaker might settle for a synthetic that looks like these materials, or even for plain wood.

Bare floors look cooler, if covered, when accented by small rugs, but long-haired types so pleasant during the winter months should be replaced with colorful lacy straws or thin flat weaves.

It is not necessary to avoid color. Hot oranges, reds and pinks and intense blues and greens, like those used on the Riviera, repeat the luxuriant colors of nature in the hot seasons and because of this, may seem less an oddity than on a cold, gray fall day. Slipcovers in such colors can be a successful adjunct to summer living.

Accessories are perhaps the easiest elements of all to shift for summer. Here, as with color, one might be cued by nature. Replace silver and china ashtrays with shells. Replace logs with potted greenery in the fireplace. Coral branches and a collection of crystalline rocks make for an attractive summer centerpiece, while on the coffee table a bowl of fruits in season might replace winter's formal candy dish.

BEDDING COMFORT

Now that the summer holiday season is in full swing, owners of country cottages might do a quick check on the hidden assets of their guest rooms. First question should concern sleeping comfort. Obviously, for this, the mattress is basic.

If it does need replacing the homemaker is in for one of the most puzzling purchases of the home. Since the quality of both the spring and mattress is hidden behind the ticking, she must take the salesman's word and depend upon the reliability of the store and manufacturer.

However, there are a few simple points the consumer might check which offer some clue to quality. Don't try to economize by buying a new mattress for use over a worn out box spring, is one warning.

The mattress test, according to this same authority, is one that should be taken lying down. If the one you select sags under your weight, eliminate it. If you're satisfied, go on to look at the borders which should be lined with cotton felt and stitched.

Each border panel should be equipped with at least four air pockets that act like tiny ventilators. Push with open hand, feel with the other to be sure these really work. Also check to see that handles for turning the mattress are sturdy and firmly secured.

For those who would quite literally like to indulge in the height of luxury is a new type mattress and spring which can be adjusted to any position so that it props you up for breakfast, for reading or just watching TV. It not only comes with either manual or electric controls, but also with an extra gadget which will pop you into sitting position just as the alarm clock goes off.

Those who are equipped with perfectly satisfactory bedding might still be interested in a new conversion kit for modernizing a bed. It enables one to take an old headboard and mattress and fit them together with metal railings and smooth-rolling casters.

What makes this do-it-yourself kit particularly desirable is the fact that for the first time the frame can be adjusted to any size of bed. Another new gadget for the more adventurous has also been introduced. This is for those who would prefer a round bed. The circular frame is adjustable too—anywhere from six to nine feet in diameter.

Testing Candy

When you are testing candy make sure that you drop a small amount into a whole cup of cold water; then count to 30 seconds to allow for cooling before checking.

Wrinkle Free

Hang a damp bath towel in the closet with clothes that you have just unpacked from a suitcase. Close the door and wrinkles will disappear from the garments.

Living With Relatives Not Always Easy To Do

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

During all the hub bub of an engagement and marriage young persons, very much in love, forget that someday they must settle down and begin to live not just with each other but with their relatives. From the many worry about her in-laws. She could remain aloof if she did not like them. This is possible only if they are physically separated. Because she has married not just the man of her choice, but his family, too. In fact when she has her first child she may be appalled to discover that her child looks more like its paternal grandmother, or its paternal aunt or uncle than it looks like herself, her husband or any of her own family.

HAVE LOVING RIGHTS

Another factor she can't ignore is that grandparents have loving rights to a grandchild. A wife cannot spurn her husband's parents and pretend they are not "good enough" to associate with her children. She forgets that her husband associated with them all his life and she considers him a desirable person. The husband who allows his wife to repudiate his parents is not worthy of the name of gentleman.

It's true that it is easier for a wife to accept advice from her mother than from her mother-in-law. Her husband will find it easier to be criticized by his family than by his wife's. Both of these are pattern to which they are accustomed and so they do not cause resentment.

MARK OF MATURITY

But the ability to get along with people, inside or out of the family, is a mark of maturity. If these two young persons are grown up and mature, they will not fight, act resentful or quarrel, but will use tact, diplomacy, humor and compromise in order to get along with their near relatives.

No nicer friendships can develop than those between a man and his wife's father and a woman and her husband's mother. And when they do it advertises

ScriptLine Held
Fate Of Studios

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Now it can be told. The fate of Universal International studios once hung on a single line of script written by the late W. G. Fields.

Director George Marshall, a key figure in the untold drama of studio finance, broke his silence this week after the death of Nate Blumberg, chairman of the board of U.I.

Marshall, a top comedy director, was assigned by Blumberg to direct the bulbous-nosed comic in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

Fields, using one of his outlandish aliases—Mahatma J. Schwartz—was the screenwriter.

"I asked Fields about the script," Marshall recalls. "He showed me one line about how his aged mother had died and would him the family circus."

"I waited a few more weeks and scheduled another story conference with Fields. He took a sip of his Napoleon sherry. His doctor had ordered him off hard liquor but this sherry was stronger than any whisky I ever tasted. Then he started reading the script: 'My aged mother dies and leaves me the family circus.' Another sip of sherry and the story conference was ended."

"This went on for weeks and Fields never got past that opening line. Meanwhile, one producer after another was assigned to the picture and all begging that I start the picture. I couldn't start with one line of script and told them so."

WINSTED, Conn. (AP)—Pud, the beagle at the home of Harold L. Crossman, is nuts about tomatoes but can't tell the red ones from the green.

Crossman discovered he had a tomato-picking hound on his hands a few days ago when he watched Pud wandering down a row of tomato plants. When the dog plucked off a red one, she would gobble it up.

When she came on a green one, which was most of the time, she would take one bite and drop it. "I haven't had a red tomato since the middle of July," Crossman said.

"Finally, Blumberg called me in and laid the cards on the table. Unless the picture started, the studio would close. The banks had promised a $600,000 cash advance the day the Fields picture started—because he was a box office name in those days. The money was needed to meet payrolls."

"I said I never had tried to direct a picture with one line of script before but I'd start this one. It was my payroll, too."

AD LIBBED
"We started the picture and ad libbed it."

The result was a comedy classic. U-I was kept open and along came Deanna Durbin to make more money for the studio.

Marshall, for his cooperation, was given the studio's choice properties, including "Destry Rides Again." That too was a classic.

Lana Turner
Stars In Film
At The Jim

Beautiful Lana Turner returned to the scene of her greatest screen triumph when she accepted producer Ross Hunter's offer to head an all-star cast in Universal-International's "Portrait in Black," set to open here Wednesday at the Jim Theatre.

It was at that studio over a year ago that Miss Turner had starred in "Imitation of Life," a movie that was destined to become one of the most popular and highest-grossing in the studio's 44-year history. For Lana it represented the most rewarding performance of her entire career.

SUSPENSE
"Portrait in Black" is a modern-day suspense story set in San Francisco. Based on the Broadway play by Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts, it was adapted for the screen by the original authors. Contrary to accepted Hollywood customs of presenting suspense dramas in black and white, low-key photography, "Portrait in Black" is a vivid presentation of lush, expensive settings and beautiful clothes and jewels photographed in color.

Sharing the star roster with Lana Turner are Anthony Quinn, Richard Basehart, Sandra Dee, John Saxon, Lloyd Nolan, Anna May Wong, Ray Walston and Virginia Grey.

FINE ARRAY
Matching this fine array of talent before the cameras are such top experts as director Michael Gordon, who guided Rock Hudson and Doris Day in their comedy hit, "Pillow Talk." Cinematographer Russ Metty, who photographed the mighty "Spartacus," and art director Richard Reidel, who won an Academy Award nomination for his "Pillow Talk" settings. The sets on "Portrait in Black" are the most lavish modern backgrounds ever constructed for a U-I production.

Because producer Hunter received wide praise for the glamorous wardrobe in which he gowned Miss Turner in "Imitation of Life," he determined to surround her again with even finer gowns. Stylist Jean Louis was brought back to design 14 gorgeous costumes for Lana as well as whipping up the first glamor wardrobe for film's number one teen-aged star, Sandra Dee.

David Webb Jewelers of New York was called upon to provide Lana's luxurious jewelry, and they specially designed and created $1,175,000 worth of jewels for place for an easy marriage.

Stewart Stars In 'Mountain Road'

James Stewart, who won an Academy Award nomination as "best actor of the year" for his work as the small town lawyer in "Anatomy of a Murder," turns his fine talent in yet another direction in William Goetz's towering "The Mountain Road," at the Paramount Theatre.

A thundering story of action during World War II, Stewart plays an Army major who tries in the Columbia Picture to stem the Japanese advance in eastern China by destroying a vital mountain road. Commanding a squad of battle-weary, bone-tired U. S. Army demolition men Stewart faces mounting obstacles in the mass of Chinese blindly fleeing the invaders, the indecision of some high Chinese officers, and the looting and killing of Chinese bandits.

The only thing to lighten his burden, as he conceives it, is his meeting with lovely Lisa Lu, a beautiful, intelligent and charming Chinese woman, recently widowed in the fighting. But the determined Major and the Chinese girl are more than worlds apart; in her eyes he lacks a feeling of compassion for the innocent victims of war and, regrettably, nothing can bridge the gulf between them, until to late Stewart proves once again, as if proof were needed, what a splendid actor he is, and Miss Lu is a glowing new star out of the East. Glenn Corbett, as an ill-fated sympathizer of the Chinese and Henry (Harry) Morgan, as Stewart's tough sergeant, also co-star. Frank Silvera plays a Chinese colonel and James Best

ALONG BROADWAY

Motion Pictures
Hasn't Hurt Him

NEW YORK (UPI)—William Inge, one of the most serious, dedicated, respected and successful of current writers for the American stage, has "discovered" motion pictures and, contrary to what you might expect, is by no means disenchanted.

In fact, at the moment—and probably only for the moment—this most subdued and reticent of playwrights is somewhat disenchanted with the Broadway theater.

"Right now," he commented, "I have nothing in preparation for the stage and don't know when I will have. The problems connected with a play—not in the writing of it but in getting it properly presented—have become so great that I rather shudder at the thought of doing another one.

"Oh, I suppose I'll get over that feeling, but for the time being I find the making of this motion picture a most relaxing and reassuring experience."

FIRST SCREEN PLAY
The film is "Splendor in the Grass," which has been shot in and around New York City during the past three months. It is not only an original script for the screen but the first screenplay by Inge. Surprisingly enough, he has never been involved in adapting for films any of the four stage hits that he turned out in seven years—"Come Back, Little Sheba," "Picnic," "Bus Stop" and "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs."

The movie version of the latter, by the way, has not yet been released, but it is due to be shown this year, as is "Splendor in the Grass."

The latter, like all of Inge's work, is deeply rooted in his own remembrance of things past. The action occurs in a Kansas town against a background of an oil-boom-and-bust period from 1928 to 1932, and the story essentially is that of a boy and girl who eventually lose each other but find themselves in the process.

COVERS MUCH GROUND
"I had written out a few scenes some years ago," Inge said, "but it was never intended to be work for the stage. It had to cover too much ground to be confined to a stage."

"I mentioned the story to Elia Kazan after he had directed my 'Dark at the Top of the Stairs' for the stage, and he said he'd make a film of it if I would write the screenplay."

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI)—Chattanooga became the third major Tennessee city to desegregate lunch counters when small groups of Negroes were served Friday without incident at seven stores.

Troubles and interracial fights broke out in the spring when young Negroes staged sit-ins at some of the stores.

The Negroes were served by pre-arranged plan at the Grant, Kress, Liggett, Rexall, Loveman, McClellan, Miller and Woolworth stores.

THE HOME SHIFT

Crape Myrtle Is Dominant

By MILDRED SWIFT

The crape myrtles continue to dominate the landscape picture in Ouachita Parish. The pale pinks (near East) and the gorgeous lavenders are so beautiful when planted together. And — when those two colors are brought into a glass paneled room the outside is inside and the inside out.

Such is the case in Anna Gray Noe's garden room. One hardly feels a dividing line between house and garden.

TROUBLES

So many calls have come in about azaleas dying. In most cases these were planted within the last year. At least half of the gardeners had fertilized heavily with commercial fertilizer when the azaleas were planted. This feeding would have been fine if the 8-8-8 had been put in the soil six or eight weeks in advance of planting time. But, when applied at time of planting the nitrogen in the fertilizer burns the feeder roots before they ever have time to get established.

If you could remember to wait until the second year before applying fertilizer to new plants, you'd avoid this burn. The plants usually put out and look fine until a drought comes and the hot summer suns start bearing down. Then the leaves start curling and browning on the edge, and soon the plant is dead.

The second reason for azaleas dying was shallow sprinkling every few days during that dry spell. A number of gardeners (most of them new) confessed to this practice. After all, there's so much to learn about gardening, all of it can't be "swallowed" the first year. Many azaleas died because of a combination of the two, first year fertilizing and shallow sprinkling.

OTHER REASONS

Several growers said they had burned their plants with improperly mixed sprays. Several said they had sprayed azaleas six or eight times this season. We don't take medicine unless we need it so let's not spray our plants unless they are diseased. Or, at least spray azaleas and camellias only once to help prevent scale.

Then some azaleas die because they are planted too deep. This often applies to old plants, too. Mulch has decayed through the years, adding more soil over the roots. These plants need lifting but you'll not want to do this now. Try to pull back a little of the soil, then transplant next winter.

Then, I've seen azaleas planted on a high mound with soil sloping away from the plant. This is going to the other extreme. It's next to impossible to water a plant well that is planted in this manner. All water just drains off too fast to soak in.

Many azaleas die because they're planted in beds next to a brick house or foundation, with not enough shade for protection. The bricks soak up heat all day and keep the plants heated all night (as well as day). Our department has always recommended you wait until you have sufficient shade before planting azaleas or camellias.

Often when a house is built, cement is dropped all around the building. This is highly alkaline and azaleas need acid soil. The plants can't do anything but die. I doubt many azaleas dying from disease or insect damage—that becomes apparent in plenty of time to apply the proper spray. However, I have seen azaleas that had been living a healthy life for many years, just suddenly die with no visible cause. They certainly don't die from old age as plants are living that are known to be over a hundred years old. Guess they just get tired living.

TIME

The flower arrangers say it is time to start gathering grasses, seed pods, leaves, etc. for fall and winter arrangements. The drying method most commonly used is to hang your flowers or leaves upside down in a dark place or tie a paper bag over them. If your hydrangeas turn green, on the bush, these can be gathered and dried by the upside down method. Many people have success drying the colored blue hydrangeas by this method. The flowers keep a little of the color, but those that turn green dry much more satisfactorily.

Leaves of magnolia, aspidistra and other evergreens are prettier if cured with glycerine. Use a deep container, put one-half water, one-half glycerine. Hammer the ends of the stems so they are soft and will absorb the glycerine. Keep in a cool place. The leaves turn a gorgeous bronze and you can use these year after year. See that the stems are down in the mixture at least four inches.

This is the time to glycerinize magnolia leaves. The new growth has hardened and is in just the right state to take up the glycerine.

Some plant forms are preserved best by the pressing method. This is generally used for ferns, leaves and small flowers. Just place the material between sheets of paper and under a weight. Newspaper is fine.

OTHER METHOD

When you wish to preserve the natural color of plants, use the sand, cornmeal or borax method. These flowers dry nicely by that method: balsam, butterfly bush, candytuft, chrysanthemum, celosia, cosmos, cornflower, dahlia, gladiolus, pansy, rose, rose-montana, stock, sunflower, Queen Anne's lace.

Be sure the flower is thoroughly dry. Strip the stem of all fol-

Homes Boost Central Air Conditioning

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The number of homes with central air conditioning has doubled in three years.

By the end of 1960, according to the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute, more than one million of the nation's 60 million homes will be centrally air conditioned. In 1957, about 500,000 homes were so equipped.

Some 70 per cent of central air conditioning units sold go into new houses, according to the institute. Although still more common in high priced houses, central air conditioning is gradually making its way into the medium and low-medium range.

Most recent news in this line was an announcement by builder William J. Levitt (of the Levittowns) that his Belair project in nearby Maryland will offer central air conditioning in each of 4,500 houses in the $15,000 to $24,000 range.

TIE-IN

Institute officials say central air conditioning also has broken down regional barriers. One reason for the pickup is that air conditioning often is tied in with central heating. This reduces initial costs, so that having central air conditioning adds no more than a few hundred dollars to the price tag of a new house—in most cases.

Operating costs vary. They depend on how many months a year air conditioning is necessary. One Texas builder reported it cost $108 a year to operate a heating-cooling system.

For most families, according to the institute, air conditioning means better sleeping in summer, fewer trips to air conditioned movies, less consumption of cold beverages and ice cream, and less hot weather grouching.

The institute gives this advice on planning for a centrally air conditioned home:

LOCATION

How the house is located on its site is important. Ideally, the long sides face north and south and the short sides face east and west. Reason: Sun exposure to the north is slight. In summer it is minimized to the south because the sun is directly overhead during the middle part of the day. The east and west sides of the house

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Keep Watch On Conifers

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Keep your eye on any conifers you planted last fall or winter—especially on those set out this past spring.

The old stiff needles on conifers cannot wilt and show you that your shrub or tree is in need of water, and it is sometimes hard to see wilting on the new tender needles or leaves. Consequently, gardeners who do not keep newly transplanted conifers watered regularly during the first season are apt to lose them suddenly. When you discover that the needles are turning brown and dropping, it is already too late. Your shrub or tree is gone.

SUSCEPTIBLE

Hemlocks are very susceptible to drought during their first few summers. If they are in a dry place, be sure to keep them mulched six inches to a foot deep. They can be sprayed at the end of the day when the sun has gone and watering should be done right through the mulch with the nozzle of the hose. If conifers are planted in hot sun get maximum exposure in the early and late parts of the day. An ordinary 100 ampere wiring system is adequate for central air conditioning and other appliances in a small to average size house, according to the institute. In large, or houses 200 amps may be needed.

Although conditions vary greatly, generally a cooling capacity of 12,000 BTU is needed to cool 600 square feet of floor area. The institute, whose 51 member firms rate their equipment in BTU says this is the most exact and useful way of measuring cooling capacity.

or against hot walls, a screen of sacking between the shrubs and the wall, and another between the shrubs and the sun will be of great benefit.

Watch again, now, for bagworms on conifers. If there are too many to pick off and burn, then spray your conifers with any spray that has arsenate of lead in it. This chemical is a stomach poison for the bagworms.

What we said last week about feeding broadleaf evergreens applies also to conifers. If the growth on conifers is sparse, or if it looks very pale green, feed immediately with a light sprinkling of cotton seed meal. Rake it into the surface around and underneath your conifers and then water it in slowly.

SHAPE UP

Conifers can be shaped up now. Usually a touch here and there with the pruners is enough. Shearing is dangerous unless you like that hair-cut effect on your bushes and trees. Many kinds will hold their own shape without any pruning or shearing at all if they are well fed and will stay dense and green.

Those who find it necessary to reduce the size of large evergreens like Pfitzer junipers should be careful when trimming them at this time of the year. They cannot grow enough to fill in your voids until next summer, so make your pruning conservative because these shrubs are going to look just as you leave them now. If they need drastic pruning, do enough now to make them respectable and leave the rest until next March just before needles begin to grow again.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Down Play In Accessories

By MARY JARDINE

The Garden Study Club of Monroe exhibited a pretty flower show featuring accessories.

There is no cut or set rule to guide the designer in selecting an accessory to complement the flower arrangement. The accessory should never dominate the finished picture. It should not be too small in relation to the arrangement. Accessories must be in scale with the plant material and container. If an accessory is to contribute to the whole, your eye must be able to include it easily in its rhythmic passage through the composition. Because directional movement of an object carries the eye, arrangers generally place a figurine to look at or move into the arrangement.

CARVED CRANES

Mrs. Morris Harrison used carved cranes from a horn as her accessories for her vertical design made in a bamboo container. This composition was placed on a mahogany base. A cluster of small peppers and mahogany tipped peppers hung over the mouth of the container. Green-brownish cana leaves were placed vertically to form the background for coleus and flowers of Chinese Varnish Tree. Tall branches of montebrelia seed pods completed the vertical line. The accessories were placed on either side looking up into the arrangement.

Mrs. C. H. Tait used a grey pottery compote for her symmetrical triangle arrangement of young pine with a roadside weed in the focal area. A lovely long lasting arrangement. Mrs. Tait's second arrangement was made in an antique crystal compote with handles on either side suggesting a fan shape design. Echeveria rosettes were placed low in the design, backed by begonia leaves. Poupée Jew (tridacanta) were placed above this. The curved branches of red leaf barberry were placed back of this forming the fan design. A lovely arrangement for the living room.

Mrs. John Lewis chose a Japanese container of a dark grey wood cylinder on a slab of grey marble. She created a pretty freeform vertical design, in tones of pink, using pink zinnias, maplesworth (Acaranthus), the plumed type of pink celosia, greenish-red cana leaves and buds. Small zinnias ranging in color from rose-pink to pale pink with acaranthus and celosia were used on one side. Large pale pink zinnias with cana leaves were used on the opposite side. A suitable arrangement for a long narrow coffee table.

CASTOR BEANS

Mrs. A. M. Guerriero used castor bean foliage, shrimp plant and orange zinnias for her triangle arrangement. A mahogany footed container and two hand carved wooden frogs moving into the arrangement were used. A very interesting combination of plant material and such rich coloring for the entrance hall. Mrs. J. H. Sooin used a black pottery cylinder container for her triangle arrangement of cana leaves with ball of fire (Amaranthus) forming the axis.

This arrangement was placed on one end of a black oblong base with two hand carved black Indonesia false faces on the other end. Suitable for a desk.

Mrs. C. T. Johnson chose a round tan pottery vase for her mass triangle design of yellow cana blossoms and buds and rust orange zinnias with dark brown centers. This arrangement was placed on a rough wooden base.

Barbecue Pit Plans Given

By AUDREY DAWSON

Our specialist recommends an inexpensive and satisfactory barbecue pit for those of you who do not have the time nor the money to build an elaborate one. All you need is 18 cinder blocks 8 x 8 x 16 inches long and a piece of one-half inch mesh wire 3 x 4 feet. To build the pit lay three blocks in a row and butt two blocks at right angles at each end then place two blocks between the ends. To lap the joints lay the second tier of blocks with the 3 blocks on the opposite side. This will make a pit 16 inches high, 4 feet long and 3 feet 4 inches wide, outside dimensions. You can barbecue 10 halves of chickens at one time on this size barbecue.

ENJOY OUTDOORS

Now you can eat outdoors, fish, play or just sit in the shade without having to fight off mosquitoes, gnats or other annoying insects. Delphene is the new discovery that can make a world of difference in your outdoor living. While Delphene repels insects, it is also quite pleasing to people. It is available in aerosols and lotions. It is non-irritating to the skin and will not stain most clothing. One application to exposed parts of the body lasts several hours. It can be purchased at most drug stores.

JUST TALKING

Miss Rupert Perry, our state agent, sent me a copy of a speech given at the American Home Economics meeting in Colorado recently which contained this anonymous prayer. I must share with you Mrs. Homemaking:

"Lord, keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every occasion. Release me from the craving to straighten out everybody else's affairs. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally it is possible I may be mistaken. Keep me reasonably sweet; I do not want to be a saint — some of them are hard to live with — but a sour old woman is one of the works of the devil. Make me thoughtful but not moody; helpful but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom it is a pity not to use it all — but Thou knowest, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end."

SOMETHING NEW

The trikot dress shirt is a new concept in wash and wear business shirts for men. Sufficient dimensional stability of fabric to insure exact collar size and sleeve lengths after washing has been solved with all Dacron and blends of 95 per cent Dacron and 5 per cent Nylon. Four manufacturers are marketing trikot business shirts at present.

Scotchgard finish is said to prevent oil and water stains. Watch for it on fabric and garment labels.

Fabrics labeled sanforized plus have met rigid test requirements for smoothness after washing, crease resistance, shrinkage, and tear strength. This label is appearing for fall 1960 in medium to heavy-weight fabrics such as twills, cords, poplins, and gabardines for sports and utility wear. Later, it will be extended to cottons of all types.

FARM HOME WEEK

This is an invitation to you, Mrs. Homemaker, from your Louisiana State University, to spend three full days on the campus August 15-18. Rooms in the dormitories are free and meals are provided in one of the air conditioned cafeterias at a reasonable rate. The programs on homemaking will include the latest research information. As an example, the clothing program will include: Becoming lines for you in pattern and fabrics; successful sewing of wash and wear fabrics, which will be demonstrated on various sewing techniques; what to look for in the fabrics you buy. If you are interested in attending Farm and Home Week, we will be glad to help you with transportation and registration plans — so, call our office FA 3-2251.

We have a few copies of the program—so, if you are interested, come by our office at 704 Cypress, West Monroe and pick up a copy.

A THOUGHT

It is not hard to talk about good works — but to do them.

Chiseling Is Charged By Manufacturer

LONG ISLAND CITY, N.Y. (UPI)—Chiseling on specifications in the building industry is getting so bad it's a disgrace, and it's high time architects put a stop to it, a prominent manufacturer said recently.

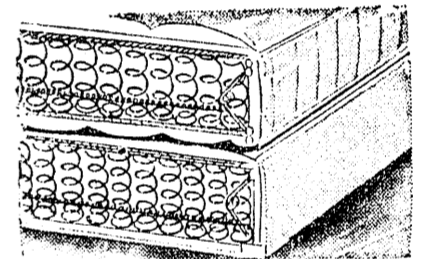

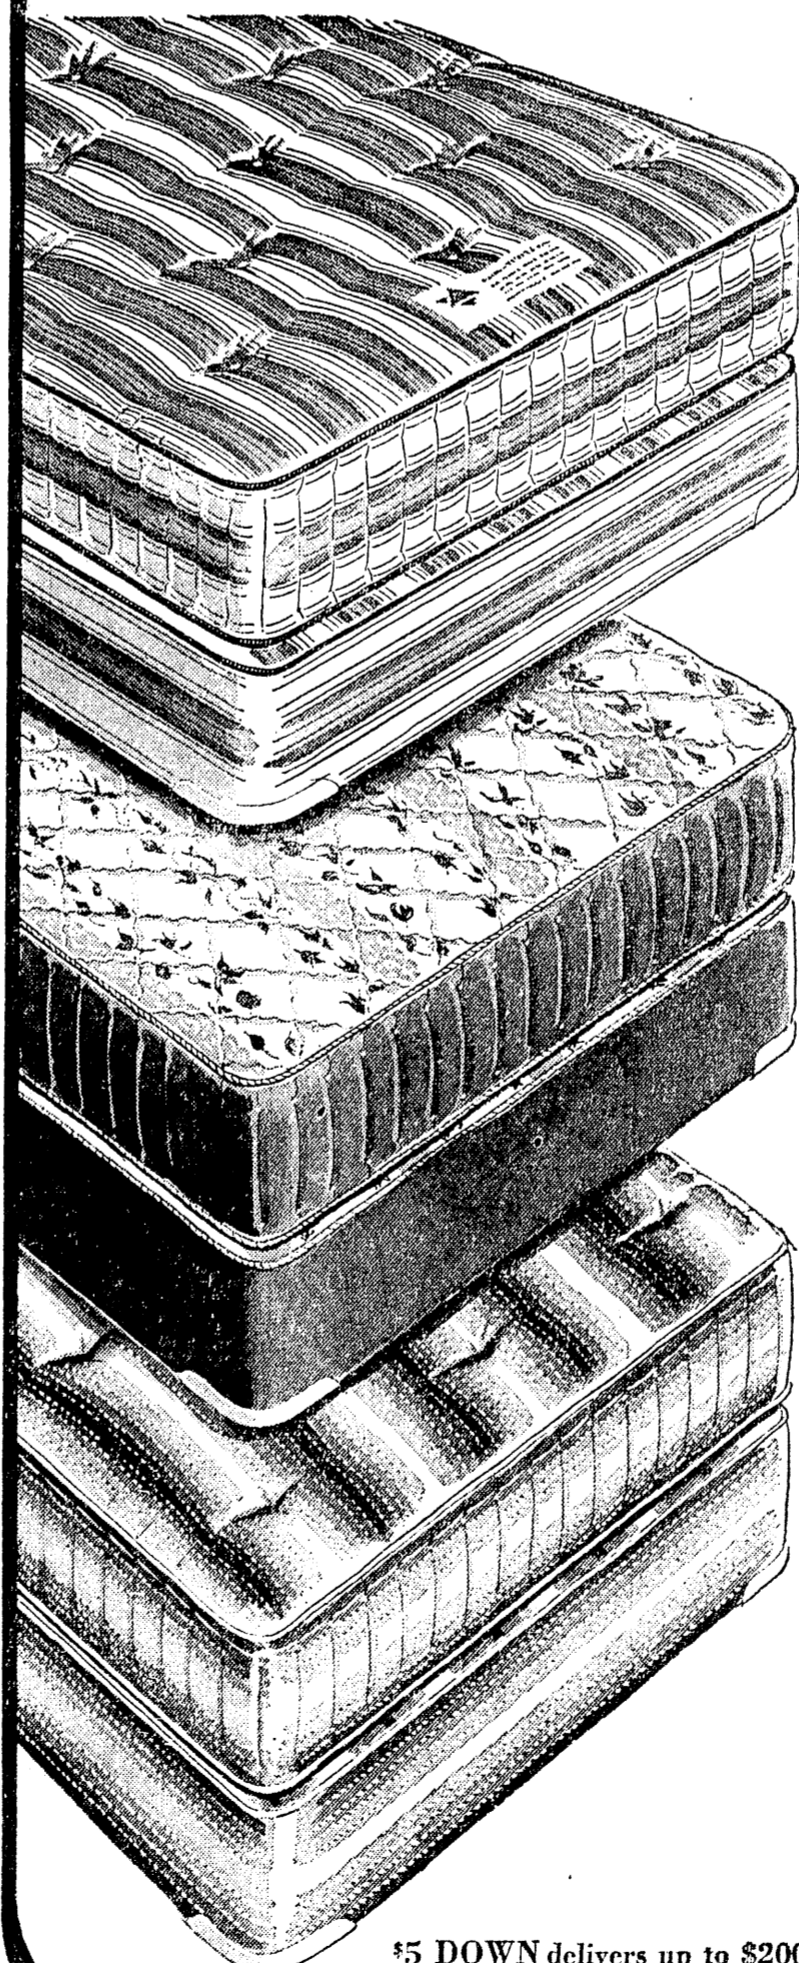

Benjamin B. Loring, president of Seaport Metals, Inc., said tight competition is partly responsible and so is the all too prevalent lust for the "fast buck." But Loring said the very diversity and complexity of the new materials presents contractors and finance companies with opportunities to chisel on the specifications. Loring has been crusading about the matter for some months. Last March he inserted a page ad in Architectural Record magazine protesting against what he considered to be widespread and scandalous cheating in specifications. Among other things he said —

"Builders stay up nights devising ways to get around the specifications. Financiers scheme to cut costs. Contractors appear to meet specifications without actually doing so.

"The specifications are like rules at school, to be broken, if possible, without getting caught."

Musician Loves To Go To Penitentiary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "It's great to be back."

This is a musician talking — about going back to prison.

He isn't going because he committed a crime. He is going for the joy it gives him in performing for the 1700 convicts at Lorton Reformatory, District of Columbia Prison at Lorton, Va., just a trombone slide from here.

The "return" this time, as in years past, is the annual Lorton Jazz Festival, probably the nation's most unusual jazz gathering. It is held for the inmates exclusively and by "invitation only."

The fifth such show is scheduled for next Thursday. Stars billed include Count Basie, with vocalist Joe Williams; Louis Armstrong, with singer Velma Middleton; and the nation's hottest new jazz group, Lambert, Hendricks and Ross, with the Ike Isaac Trio.

These jazz greats, who make more money weekly than the average American earns in a year, have again donated their services, working only for the applause — and gratitude of the men behind the bars.

The festival was originated five years ago by the prison's chief Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Carl J. Breitfeller, when he asked vocalist Sarah Vaughan to perform. Sarah packed the prison auditorium. The convicts got a new taste of the "outside" entertainment and loved it, said Father Breitfeller. From then on, with the blessing of D.C. prison director Donald Clemmer, the priest decided to make jazz an annual thing at Lorton.

Breitfeller and two fellow Dominican fathers, the Rev. Nicholas B. Reid and the Rev. Donald F. Sherry, are in charge of the event.

Since the original festival, inmates at Lorton have been entertained by Armstrong, trombonist Jack Teagarden, Art Blakey and his Jazz Messengers, the Hi-Lo's, guitarist Charlie Byrd, and trombonist Kai Winding's Septet.

Singer Ella Fitzgerald and the Oscar Peterson Trio were a smash hit at last year's show.

"We believe music uplifts the spirit," the Dominican fathers said, "and the men we have at Lorton Prison enjoy jazz music most of all. We believe the festival helps lift the prisoners away from prison thoughts and out of prison atmosphere for a little while, and this is good for them."

The auditorium where Miss Vaughan initiated the festival, burned down. Succeeding shows have been held on the prison's athletic field. The stars use one dugout for a dressing room. Another houses sound equipment, donated by a local company.

The priests and prison officials believe the festival is the envy of both the jazz and prison worlds.

"I think it is a pleasant diversion for the prisoners," Director Clemmer told UPI. "Although it's not rehabilitative, it does create interest among the prisoners and I heartily support the festival."

Clemmer added with a smile: "Of course, we wouldn't want it to get like Newport," referring to the recent riots at the famous Newport, R.I., Jazz Festival.

Portable Darkroom Aid For Vacation Pictures

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

"Have darkroom, will travel" is no longer just a funny line for a vacationing camera fan. It's a reality, a new portable darkroom kit for developing roll film anywhere.

The complete unit is contained in an attractive attache case which has a shoulder strap, as well as hand grip, to leave the hands free for the camera or other luggage. The components inside are a changing bag, roll film developing tank, four plastic bottles, a six-minute sand "hourglass" timer and four spring clips.

DEVELOPED
Called Unikil Senior, the portable package was developed by Cormac Chemical Co. to enable traveling photographers to use their combination one - solution developer - fixer easily. Here's how the system works:

The changing bag is the portable darkroom. It's made of light material with a zipper at one end and two sleeves at the other end. It provides the absolute darkness needed when loading the exposed film into the tank. The tank, the adjustable reel, the tank cover and the roll of film are placed inside the open bag and the zipper is closed.

The hands are inserted through the sleeves, which have an elastic end to hug the arms. They unwind the film, thread it onto the reel, place it into the tank and replace the cover. Now the bag is zipped open and the loaded tank removed.

One of the plastic bottles contain unibath CC-1 for normal exposures and the second has CC-2 for maximum film speed development. These are both concentrated solutions so a third bottle is empty for diluting either CC-1 or CC-2 with an equal amount of water. The fourth bottle contains a quick-drying solution, Undri.

FILM TANK
The film tank is different from regular roll film tanks in two ways: It has a curved bottom and its opening threads onto the plastic bottle tops. After a loaded film tank is threaded onto the bottle with the working solution, both are inverted. The solution flows down into the tank and when the tank is full, the miniature hourglass-timer is inverted.

Continuous agitation is recommended while the sand drops into the lower compartment for six minutes. At the end of that time, the roll of film has been developed and fixed. One bottle of solution can process 14 rolls of 120 film size or 12 rolls of VACATION REMINDER: There are sights to see and to picture when a camera fan goes traveling, but it's a question as to whether they're captured on film. On-the-spot, quick processing now answers that question.

36-exposure 35mm film. COMBINATION
Any time after six minutes, the tank-bottle combination is again inverted and the solution flows back into the bottle to be stored away for the next processing session. The solution drains readily because of the curved tank bottom. During the procedure, there is no need to bother about the solution temperature as long as it is in the normal room temperature range up to 80 degrees.

The next step is a five-minute wash for the film in the tank under a water faucet. Then the tank is attached to the quick-dry bottle and turned over for two minutes. It will help the film dry faster and without water spots. After the solution is returned to its bottle, the film can be removed and hung up to dry. One spring clip holds it at the top and it is suspended from a string while another clip is attached to the bottom as a weight to prevent curling.

With this procedure, a vacationing camera fan can tell within 15 minutes whether his pictures are successful and has a chance to retake those scenes which are not satisfactory.

For stay-at-home photographers, a smaller junior kit in carrying case is available. It doesn't include the changing bag or the C-2 solution.

21 British Army Girls 'Told Off'

MANORBIER, Wales (AP) — Twenty-one British army girls who complained an army curfew was wrecking their love life were told off today by their commanding officer, a woman major.

The girls apologized. They had staged a midnight protest against a regulation requiring them to be back in camp by 11 p.m. They refused to move until an army patrol—all men—was sent out to herd them into the camp guardhouse.

"We felt we were being treated like children and that we were not being trusted," said Pvt. Elizabeth McConnachie, 17, a leader of the mutiny.

"A lot of the girls' boy friends were displeased at having to bring them back so early. It was very frustrating."

Later, they were brought before the commanding officer, Maj. Joan Crooke. One of the girls said Maj. Crooke gave them a "good telling off."

The girls are in the Women's Royal Army Corps, known as the WRACs.

A War Office spokesman in London said the problem had been settled locally.

"We don't think this is anything worth making a fuss about," he said.

State Foreseen

BATON ROUGE (UPI)—Louisiana economists have predicted a $1 million state timber severance tax increase in 10 years because of mushrooming pulp and lumber needs.

According to a forest survey report released this week, gross severance tax income, based on present tax rates, will rise from $748,000 in 1959 to $1,740,000 in 1970.

Prospects in the timber market by 1970 are that the pulp market will be using 2.5 million cords of pine and a half-million cords of hardwood. The survey report predicts saw-timber, pole and piling markets will eat up 800 million board feet of hardwood timber.

Forest foresters also envision 1970 unit prices for raw products may be $35 to $20 per thousand board feet for pine and hardwood logs respectively, and $5 and $3 per cord respectively for pine and hardwood pulp.
